ALL FOR THE BEST

Mr. Goslington Philosophizes on Human Life.

Finally Comes to the Very Wise Conclusion That Many Seemingly Misfortunes Are Really Blessings in Disguise.

"Glimmerby, my friend Glimmerby," said Mr. Goslington, "propounds the theory that both poverty and worry are conducive to longevity, and I think there is something in that. I am not so sure about the worry, and yet I think even that may be true. I can see, for instance, that if a man worried hard enough he would keep himself lean and so escape the ills and inconveniences attendant upon obesity; but that poverty tends to lengthen life I have no doubt whatever."

"The man who is poor, as we most of us are, has to work for a living. Surely it is in work that we are most blessed; and if we have work to do in which we are interested, that appeals to us, then are we fortunate indeed; we find a pleasure in labor and a joy in accomplishment; and it makes me smile to think how in such work we forget our worries entirely."

"So we don't really need to consider whether worry is a life prolonger or not; all we want to lengthen our days is to be poor, poor enough so that we have to work and keep plugging; but I do wonder that Glimmerby did not mention along with poverty and worry, as among the things that might tend to prolong life, our physical ailments."

"Some years ago a friend of mine began to lose weight and he kept on in that way until he had lost 25 pounds. Then he consulted a doctor. It was something that could be checked, controlled and perhaps entirely cured if the patient would follow faithfully the prescribed treatment; and then he was told that the general benefits he would derive from the treatment were such that his life might be prolonged to a greater limit than it would have reached if he had never had this ailment at all."

"I might add that this friend has now recovered several of his lost pounds, he is feeling very chipper and cheerful and he fully expects to live to be a very old man."

"The fact is that many things that we may look at, when they come upon us, as drawbacks are in reality blessings in disguise."

SPAIN'S ANCIENT HERO.

Coffin of the Old Removed to New Burial Place.

It is said on unimpeachable authority that the creator of the now-defunct expression, "Oh, you kid," was a Castilian maiden who witnessed one of the more notable exploits of the Cid, the national hero of Spain. It is safe to say, however, that the Canadian schoolboy who read about Cid Campeador in a brightly-illustrated story book in the public library was quite right in saying that the Cid was "some kid." The children know much more about these old-time fighters than do their elders and will hardly be surprised to learn that the occasion of the transfer of the Cid's coffin from one location to another was quite important enough to bring the present monarchs of Spain, King Alfonso and Queen Victoria, to Burgos, his burial place.

The Cid was the hero of Roncesvalles, which may or may not have something to do with the unpronounceable Roncesvalles avenue, Toronto. He was the bold knight who blew a blast so loud that all the pacifists rushed to his aid from many miles around, the sound being "on Fontarabian echoes borne" or something of that sort and that the Moors got an awful hiding. Of course, the Cid had many other adventures and was Rodrigo Diaz, or Ruy Diaz, and the Cid really means the conqueror. He flourished in 1064, which makes him contemporary to our own William the Conqueror, but do not try to fool the boys in believing that they were one and the same person.

The Cid was the finest flower of Spanish crusading chivalry. His country had long been under Moorish control. The Moors were quite civilized and all that, but they were infidel or non-Christian and that was enough for the northern folk who still held to their castle in the northern mountains and saw that the very Moors were very much as well as very Mohammedan. The knights found plenty to do, quarreling among themselves when the heathen was too strong. Young Rodrigo's first trouble was banishment by King Ferdinand of Castille but he returned to save his country from a Moorish invasion, to marry a girl who had once sought his life and to win much booty and fame before meeting death fighting against odds.

It would be interesting if Sir Arthur Conan Doyle could get into touch with the Cid or his lady Doña Ximena of the marina, a blossomy skin at this time and see what they think of the transfer of the body on a gun caisson instead of on a prancing charger. Times have moved since the eleventh century, since Robert the Bruce and Cid hewed down the infidel in Spain. But the hero and worship of the hero remain.

All Alike.

Lady Astor, the American M. P., told in London the other day a story about an anti-suffragist.

"Anti-suffragists are all alike," she said. "Once I was canvassing for signatures to a petition about Lord Milner, the viceroy to India at that time. When I called on Mr. Boggs, the grocer, he read the petition carefully and then said:

"Who is this here Milner, ma'am?"

"Our Indian viceroy," said I.

"Wot's a viceroy?" said Mr. Boggs.

"A pro-consul, you know," I explained Lord Milner's position in detail.

"Mr. Boggs, satisfied, dipped his pen in the ink; then he looked anxiously.

"You're not lettin' the women sign this, are you?" he said.

"Oh, no, indeed," said I.

"That's right," said Mr. Boggs, as he slowly traced his signature. "That's right, ma'am. Women don't know nothin' about these things."

Radium Economy.

The use of radium on a large scale therapeutically involves danger of loss, and this factor has been a big one in inducing hospitals and clinics with a gram or more of the element in use to utilize radium emanation instead of applicators containing the radium itself. There has been installed in a Pittsburgh laboratory an elegant and useful apparatus for the collection, purification and tubing of radiation emanation obtained from a salt of the element. It differs from earlier apparatus in that liquid air is replaced by chemical means of purifying the emanation, which are felt to be more reliable.

Airplanes for Seamen.

A Sydney (New South Wales) business firm engaged in the manufacture of rubber is equipping its commercial travelers with an airplane. This is the first of three to be similarly employed by the firm. Miss Dorothy Perdreau made a trip with the "bagman-pilot," Lieut. J. H. Butler. It is stated that Australia imports annually $5,000,000 worth of rubber goods. By their aerial deliveries this firm expects to get a greater share of this business.

All But That.

"I can make any boast that my husband can make," said the equal rights lady, who was making a speech.

"All right," said a man in the audience; "go ahead and do it. I just heard your husband say that he was a man of few words."

When a Body Dies.

Recent study has led physiologists to the conclusion that the brain may live for twenty minutes or half an hour after a person has apparently "given up the ghost."

The heart, taken out of the body, will continue to beat for twenty-four hours if a stream of oxygenated blood is kept flowing through it.

Death from loss of blood is attended by no pain. The antients, appreciating this fact, commonly had resort to "opening the veins" when they sought to commit suicide.

Drowning is an easy death, described by persons who have survived the process as "like falling asleep." It is said to be more painful to be resuscitated than to drown.

In the "dying hour" the sense of smell falls first; then taste, sight, touch and finally hearing.

The "death struggle" or "death agony" is an imaginary phenomenon. Convulsive movements usually occur toward the last, but they are mere nervous reactions of which the dying person is unconscious. A last illness may be painful, but death is painless.

One person in every 1,000 dies a "natural" death—that is to say, of old age. The remaining 999 die of disease.

It often happens in extreme old age that a marked weakening of the mental faculties is observable. Persons thus afflicted are said to be in their "dotage." They have to be cared for like small children. It is a trouble due to structural disintegration of the brain, which like any other organ, is liable to wear out. As a matter of fact the brain, in these persons, wore out before their bodies.

Turning Night Into Day.

One of the strangest flowers, and one that is not often seen, because it only blossoms after night has fallen, and then withers before dawn comes, is the sereus. Except at the time it blooms, this plant, which is one of the few that turn night into day, is not at all attractive in appearance. What you see is nothing more than a leafless, distorted tangle of discolored and repellent vegetable fibres.

But when this unpromising mass of rods does break into blossom, it throws out flowers as beautiful as they are deliciously scented. The bud begins to unfold a little after dusk, and in an hour or two it has grown to a large flower several feet in circumference, which at midnight is brown and orange and white, and fills the air with a heavy tropical scent like a compound of fresh frangipanni, roses, and tiger lilies. An hour or so before dawn the flowers begin to fade, and before breakfast the plant is again an apparently withered heap.

Keeping Up Tradition.

Angry Father: "How dare you come home like this in the middle of the term, sir. And how dare you have the audacity to tell me you don't like your school? Why, that school has turned out some of the most brilliant men in the country!"

Young Hopeful: "Yes, dad; they turned me out!"
