Settlement of Will Case

The will of the late Nelson Dennis, of Walpole, was the subject of an action in the County Court at Cayuga before Judge Hopkins, on the 12th inst., when Elliott Dennis and other children of the deceased were contesting the provisions of the document (which was largely in favor of his widow, who was his second wife) on the ground that undue influence had been used, and that the testator was not mentally capable of making the will when the instrument was drawn up. Under the will, three of the children were given legacies of $500 each. A settlement was arrived at whereby the farm is to be sold in October next, when the legacies to the children are to be paid and from the remaining portion the widow is to receive $300 per year as long as she lives. She also gets the chattels, the money in the bank, and pays all debts and funeral expenses. Upon her death, the balance remaining is to be equally divided among the children of the late Mr. Dennis. The executors are Messrs. S. A. Thompson and John N. Awde. Mr. R. S. Colter appeared for the children and Mr. S. A. Lindsay for the executors.

Judge Colter Retires

Leaves Bench in Elgin Under Superannuation Act.

Charles Wesley Colter, senior judge of the county court and judge of the surrogate court for the County of Elgin, last Saturday observed two very important events in the history of his life. The one was his attainment of the age of 75 years, and the other his retirement from the bench, which is in compliance with the terms of a recent act of the Federal Government, which provides for the superannuation of all judges on attaining the age of 75.

His honor's retirement from the bench will be a source of widespread regret, for he is, perhaps, one of the best known men in Western Ontario, where he has spent a goodly part of his life, not only in municipal, but in political work. However, his successor, Judge Charles O. Ermatinger, now junior judge, is equally capable and will no doubt measure up to his predecessor on the bench. It is possible that arrangements may be made for Judge Colter to still retain his judicial position in the surrogate court although the act does not so specify. Nothing definite as regards this is known.

Judge Colter first saw the light of day in York County, New Brunswick, where he afterwards obtained the greater part of his education and spent his early days. His parents were the late Samuel and Anne Colter, who came to Canada in the early 20's from the north of Ireland, and on a recent visit to his native country the judge was surprised to learn that an uncle of his father is still remembered there for bravery in the rebellion of 1798. He was killed while fighting on the side of the loyalists and to this day his name is honored. It was on account of this historic occurrence that the judge's father was named Samuel. His mother, formerly Miss Anne Johnson, is of Welsh descent, and traces her ancestors back to the early princes of that part of Great Britain.

The judge received his early education in what was then known as the common school of New Brunswick. When 14 years of age he entered the Sackville Academy, where he spent two years, later entering the University of New Brunswick where, after three years he graduated with scholarships in English, languages, literature and classics. He then taught school for a period of three years, after which he came to Ontario, settling in Cayuga. In the year 1868 he began to teach school at the Dunnville High School. In 1876 he began the study of law and was admitted to the bar three years later. In 1891 he was made queen's counsellor, and in the same year he received his appointment as county crown attorney. He occupied this position until 1903, when he was appointed judge of Haldimand County, and in 1904 he was transferred to Elgin and given the two appointments above mentioned, succeeding the late Judge Hughes. He also served during his law practice as clerk and solicitor of Haldimand County Council from 1889 to 1903.

The judge's political career, while not a lengthy one, is none the less an extremely interesting affair and he can tell some very interesting and remarkable anecdotes of his experiences during campaigns and in Parliament. He had the unique experience of taking part in no less than six campaigns for federal honors in a period of little over five years. His first venture was in September, 1896, when he opposed the late Major William Hamilton Merritt. He was successful on this occasion, but in 1897 Parliament dissolved and an election was held with Mr. Colter representing the Liberal party once more, but this time he had the late Dr. Montague as his opponent. On this occasion he was elected by a majority of 13, but on a recount following a protest was counted out by the judge of the county.

Mr. Colter's friends made a protest and another election was held in November, 1897, when he was defeated by eight votes with the same opponent. This contest was again protested and in another election a short time later the judge was successful by 46 votes. This did not end the struggle and still another protest was made three years later and the judge and the late Dr. Montague once more went through a campaign in 1891. The judge was defeated on this occasion and later was appointed county crown attorney for Haldimand.

The judge has been married 54 years and has four sons and three daughters. Two his sons, Harry and Richard, are now practicing law in Cayuga, and the other two are in business in Buffalo.

As an evidence of the regret felt at the retirement of Judge Colter the charge of the grand jury at the last general sessions in December last bears testimony. The charge stated that the jury and general public opinion felt that some arrangement should be made so that the judge might take advantage of his years of experience by remaining on the bench a few years longer.

Judge Colter at that time replied that while he felt just as young as he did many years ago, there was still the possibility that a man of his age would have more antiquated ideas than would be suitable in a judicial position such as his and it was perfectly right that he should be asked to make way for a younger man.

The Police Commissioners and members of the St. Thomas police department presented Judge C. W. Colter, on Friday, with a gold-headed cane, a pipe and an illuminated address. The presentation was made by Mayor Brinkman. Magistrate Maxwell read the address.

W. E. KELLY, K. C.

Appointed County Crown Attorney for Norfolk.

The appointment of W. E. Kelly, K.C., as county crown attorney for Norfolk, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late T. R. Slaght, is announced. Mr. Kelly is a native of Norfolk, a son of the late David Kelly, a Woodhouse Township farmer.

He attended Simcoe high school and graduated from Osgoode Hall in 1898 and shortly afterwards went into partnership with Mr. J. Porter. The partnership still exists and Mr. Porter is as well county clerk and county treasurer. Mr. Kelly was appointed a K. C. in 1908 and for many years he has enjoyed a wide practice as a solicitor in and out of the county. Mr. Kelly has been for years a member of the Simcoe Board of Education.

Flourishing Institution

The patrons of the Black Creek Creamery held one of the best meetings in the history of the organization in the Town Hall on Friday of last week. Mr. J. B. Smith, of Brampton, inspector and sanitary inspector for this district gave a practical address to those assembled to learn the details of the year's operations. During the course of the address he emphasized the necessity of better sires. A new feature of the meeting was the discussion by the patrons of the different methods of handling milk cows during the butter season. This discussion was led by Thos. Snowden followed by Fred Lindsay and Lorne Roberts. The many interesting questions which were asked during this discussion showed the immense gain the idea of scientific farming had made during past few years.

That the dairy business had made almost incredible strides—from the monetary standpoint—was evidenced from the statement by Mr. Lindsay that when he was a boy, the milk from nine cows sent to a cheese factory during six months, gave the magnificent (?) return of $24. Today one of the patrons, Warren Banfield, with six cows would receive in the neighborhood of $1200. Although all commodities were much cheaper a decade ago, the difference in the two amounts was worthy of notice.

Although the product of the creamery fell 600 pounds below the output of 1919, the returns were $6,000 better than those of 1919 and totalled over $134,000.

Edgar Meade was re-appointed auditor at the same salary as that of 1920.

Instead of having the butter made at the flat rate per pound, the manager, Lea Marshall, made a proposition to the patrons that he should pay the same price as that offered by the Farmers' Co-operative of Toronto and haul the butter fat to the factory at his own expense. The patrons decided that it would be more along co-operative lines for them to furnish the butter fat and pay a fixed price per pound for the making of the butter, which plan had been followed for several years.

It goes without saying after reading the foregoing report, that the patrons of The Black Creek Creamery have cause for great satisfaction in that they have such a fair minded, conscientious and energetic manager as Mr. Marshall.—Port Dover Maple Leaf.
