We Are So Well Known That we do not need to Advertise

Is a common argument a publisher often hears.

The biggest and best known corporations in the world believe in publicity. They believe in keeping in touch with the people all the time.

Railroads, Mail Order Houses, Steamship Lines, Banks, etc., are well known and still they advertise. In fact successful houses all lay their success to the fact that

Persistent Publicity Produces Profits

They all believe in using the Weekly Local Paper and spend thousands of dollars in thus getting in touch with the homes in each locality.

Advertising in a Weekly never escapes the eye. The reader takes it up in an hour of leisure, looks over it thoroughly, and passes it on to the other members of the family, who are always interested in a careful resume of the local events of the week.

The Record is the only paper that covers Jarvis and vicinity thoroughly. It is to be found in almost every home.

WEYGAND'S ROYAL BIRTH

He the Son of Leopold II., Or of Emperor Maximilian.

A new mystery has been absorbing Belgium recently. Is it true that the latest military hero, Gen. Weygand, the right-hand man of Marshal Foch and the accredited saviour of Poland, is of royal blood?

The question is discussed by Edward Truis in an article in the New York World. He says:

During the war a rumor was circulated with a certain amount of persistence that the famous general was a son of the late Leopold II., and consequently the uncle of King Albert I. Recently a French weekly, 'Aux Ecoules,' gave a new consistency to these rumors by asserting that Gen. Weygand was the son of a monarch who died a few years ago, that he was born of a morganatic marriage, and that his education was directed by his father himself, who made him enter the Ecole de Saint-Cyr, where he was enrolled under a different name from that which he bears to-day.

At the time of the victory parade of July 21, 1919, the citizens of Brussels were very much surprised at not seeing the future victor of the battle of Warsaw in the marshal's suite. It is rumored that he had been informed from high quarters that it was advisable that he should avoid meeting the nephew of Leopold II., the present king, in the Belgian capital.

On the other hand, it is said that Maxime Weygand, born in Brussels on January 27, 1867, could be no other than the legitimate son of the unfortunate Emperor of Mexico, Maximilian, and the Empress Carlotta.

The Empress Carlotta left Mexico on July 8, 1866, and landed at Saint Nazaire on August 8. The unfortunate princess went to Paris to ask help of Napoleon III. for her husband, who was already in a very critical situation. When Napoleon refused her request she had a very violent scene with him.

From Paris she went to Rome, where she had an interview with the Pope. It was at this time, in September, 1866, that she suffered, on a public occasion, her first public attack of insanity. She returned to Belgium, and from this time on lived a very retired life. As has appeared, the child was born toward the end of January, 1867, not quite six months after her arrival in France from Mexico.

It is said in support of the theory that Weygand is this son, that the Maximilian dynasty should be stifled and that after Maximilian's execution the child was given to an accountant named Weygand. Quite a story, isn't it?

The Half-Men.

A Western city in the United States, recently, having rounded up 900 of its deserters of families, discovered that they had abandoned 4,700 children.

Family desertion is a common mark of the mental defective—the "half-man," as Dr. Seth K. Humphrey calls him.

Probably 900 desirable families picked at random in that same city could not muster an average of two children each. But the "half-man" and the "half-woman" are extremely fecund. They multiply at a surprising rate, and most of their children are mental defectives.

The "half-people" in North America are producing offspring at more than twice the rate of the desirable people. Their children cannot hold their own in the struggle for existence. They are unable to hold jobs when they get them. Commonly they become criminals. Designing agitators find them easy prey. Philanthropy is staggered by the problem which their steadily increasing numbers present.

With every generation their numbers are doubled. What is to be done about it?

Why We Yawn.

Oxygen is one of the elements of the air which is essential to the healthy, normal action of the lungs. Unless a sufficient quantity of oxygen is taken into the body, the lungs become irritated and flash a signal to the brain that a larger supply is necessary.

The easiest way to overcome this shortage of oxygen is to take in an increased amount of air at one time. Hence the nerves which regulate our breathing apparatus react upon our jaw and throat muscles, causing both of them to open wide.

The reason that yawning is usually connected with a feeling of drowsiness is because a desire for sleep is a sign that the body is tired and is seeking either rest or an added amount of oxygen.

New Kind of Silk.

Discovery has been made of a process by which the muscular tissue of horses and cattle can be converted into silk—a use being thus found for condemned cows and horses killed because of accident or old age.

The flesh is softened by saturating it in a liquid, which separates the muscle fibres by dissolving the substance that holds them together. Then it is soaked in another liquid, which strengthens the fibre and gives them a silky character.

Silk thus obtained can be rubberized and made waterproof by soaking it for some hours in a bath of rubber.

Just Fancy That!

The first prize ever won by Mr. Lloyd George was for singing. In India it is common for a judge to indulge in smoking while on the bench.

King George's life insurance policies total something like $10,000,000 in value.

Canada receive 150,000 immigrants in 1920; 80,000 were from the United Kingdom.

When a seventh son is born in Argentina, the President of the Republic becomes his godfather.

MORE THAN USUALLY WARM

Sailors Declare the Gulf Stream is Outgoing Itself at This Season, for Some Reason.

Marine men blame the Gulf stream for the summer weather prevailing along the Atlantic coast. They say the water of the Gulf stream is almost boiling.

In Norfolk, Va., the temperature was 86 degrees. A hundred miles out to sea just before the Gulf stream is reached the temperature was 101, according to information brought there by marine men. Within one day's run from Norfolk by water there was a difference of nearly 40 degrees in the temperature. It was so hot in the Gulf stream, marine men said, it was almost unbearable to remain on deck during the day.

Vessels passing through the peculiar water during the day say the weather is hotter than they have ever experienced before. A difference in the temperature of the water dipped from the Gulf stream with buckets from ships with that of the ocean itself is the difference, marine men report, between moderately cool water and that warm enough almost to poach an egg. The Gulf stream water is lighter than the remainder of the ocean and when first dipped foams and bubbles like water just on the point of boiling.

It was reported that an American destroyer would go out to the Gulf stream with a party of experts for the purpose of making observations for use by the government and to ascertain if reports brought in by merchant ships are authentic.

COULD FEEL FOR AFFLICTION

Man Had Not Forgotten How It Felt to Be Deprived of the Blessing of Sight.

He looked as if he owned a bank. And he was talking to a man who looked as if he owned two.

And while they confabbed in front of a hotel a wrinkled woman came up to them leading a wrinkled man. She was selling matches—5 cents a box, three for—

The one-bank man waved aside the matches, but put some money in the woman's hands, and asked her unlucky companion how he came to lose his sight.

The blind man said that he had never had any sight to lose. He was born that way.

The man of the two banks chipped in with a donation, then the couple moved on, the blind man, philosophically serene and the woman shrilling her slogan—"Matches! Five cents a box, three for—"

And the one-bank man said to the one who owned two:

"I had my eyes bandaged for a week once. Blindness is a tragic thing." Which showed that, in his case anyhow, a little knowledge was not a dangerous thing.—Washington Star.

Dolls in Literature.

A London writer has recently introduced the subject of dolls in literature. Almost anyone, who will trouble to search his memory, can discover a doll somewhere between the covers of many a book which he has read. Beginning with a "sighting reference to them under the name of babies," in Sydney's "Arcadia," and noting the mention of a doll by Charlotte Bronte, this writer concludes that, until the nineteenth century, dolls were neglected by English authors and that they appear more frequently in French than in English fiction. Dickens seems to have had more to say about dolls than any other English author; but the doll Nobby is an important personage in Mr. Wells' "Peter and Joan," and the dolls' house in "Tono-Bungay" contained 85 dolls, although with none of them does the reader become personally acquainted. Jerry and Rosa, in "The Golden Age," are also remembered.

German Farming Methods.

Germany may have led the world in some branches of technical skill but her farming methods left much to be desired if the bitter contempt poured upon them by a Bunyip soldier can serve as a standard. Bunyip, Victoria, Australia, is proud of its knowledge of soil culture, and 17 months spent as a prisoner of war at threepence a day on a farm in Silesia, Germany, made one of its finest citizens more convinced than ever that Bunyip is always best. When he returned to Australia and applied for a farm he was asked, as a joke, if he could give a reference from his previous employer. His reply would have been gail and wormwood to the Silesian.

United States Sex Statistics.

The census of 1910 showed 2,691,978 more males than females in the United States. In all but Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina and the District of Columbia, the males are in excess. In all the world females are a little in excess. The reverse in America is evidently due to the excess in male immigration.

Breaking It Gently.

"You were discharged?" "No, indeed!" "But you lost your job." "It happened this way: The boss informed me in the kindest possible manner that there would be no limit set for my vacation this year."

Airplane Service in Australia.

A company has been formed in Australia to conduct an airplane passenger and freight service among the principal cities of the commonwealth.

25 years ago sweet breads and kidneys went begging at all butcher shops, now customers beg the privilege of buying, and that is the law of supply and demand.

Shop carefully and the cost of living will come down, the minute everybody rushes for one thing—necessity or fad—a scarcity is created and cost of production rises.
