Telling the Truth

The editor of a small town newspaper, the Madelia (South Dakota) News, gives a homely illustration of the trials of an editor in endeavoring to tell the truth, and still offend no one. He says:

"A preacher came at the editor in this way: 'You editors do not tell the truth. If you did you could not live; your newspaper would be a failure.'"

"And the editor came back at the minister in this manner: 'You are right, and the minister who will at all times and all circumstances tell the whole truth about his member, alive or dead, will not occupy his pulpit more than one Sunday, and then he will find it necessary to leave town in a hurry. The press and the pulpit go hand in hand with the whitewash brushes and pleasant words magnifying little virtues into big ones. The pulpit, the pen and the gravestone are the great saint-making triumvirate.' And the minister went away looking very thoughtful, while the editor turned to his work, and told of the unsurpassing beauty of the bride who in fact was homely as a mud fence."

DISCIPLINED ANIMALS

ACTS WHICH INDICATE THAT WILD HORSES OBEY THEIR LEADER MORE IMPLICITLY THAN ANY SOLDIERS, AND THE BABOONS OF AFRICA HAVE MILITARY REGULATIONS, WHICH INCLUDE SENTRIES WHO MAKE UP A FRONT AND REAR GUARD AT NIGHT.

It is interesting to know that certain animals are governed by what appear to be almost military regulations. Among animals only the gregarious, of course, show qualities of leadership and discipline. Wild horses obey their leader more implicitly than any soldiers, however well satisfied. Mustangs are wary, difficult to approach and almost impossible to capture owing to the devotion with which they follow their leader and to a code of signals that they never disregard. A short, shrill neigh is the command to flee; a long drawn, far carrying neigh is the rallying call when the herd is scattered; a squeal orders the stallions to stand ready to fight off dangerous beasts, and a wild snort indicates the sight or scent of man. The snort of a mustang can be heard half a mile.

Certain movements are also important as signals. At the first hint of danger the horse that detects it throws his head and tail high in the air, stands motionless and gazes fixedly in the direction from which he anticipates trouble. Usually that is enough to put the entire drove on the alert. Should the enemy prove to be bears, wolves or any foe against which the horse can defend itself the "signal horse" dashes forward, prancing from side to side, rearing and striking the ground.

Should their most dreaded enemy, man, be approaching the horse will circle far in toward the main body, and as he turns for one last look he will snort out a trumpet-like blast. Then with a rush, a roar and a clatter of hoofs the entire drove is gone—the leader in front, the stallions in the rear, the colts in the middle.

Even old, well trained work horses when turned out to pasture will generally select a leader and be governed by him. The drove commander may be an old and gentle mare or the wildest and warriest. In the latter case the herd often becomes almost as difficult to handle as so many wild horses, whereas the old mare will keep her drove in the most tractable condition.

The peccary of Mexico have a battle cry that is never disobeyed—a shrill, vicious squeal, quickly repeated. That noise drives the little black tracks all within hearing range to get into the fray, and nothing short of death stops their charge. If the hunter does not shoot his peccary so that it cannot emit a single dying squeal his only safety lies in instant flight.

The peccary has also a note that sounds the retreat. It is a grunt something like the "Woof! Woof! Woof!" of a bear as he dashes away from danger. An American guide who lives in Sonora, Mexico, can imitate that note and says that he can stampede a pack of the brutes at will with it.

The baboons of Africa have probably what are the best military regulations of any of the animals. While they are feeding in a dangerous place they set sentries on every side—big, wise, veteran baboons that sit perfectly quiet and keep a vigilant watch. At a sharp bark of warning from one of these outposts every ape ceases his occupation; even the babies hush their cries.

At another bark all may resume work or play; or, again, the second note may carry a different message; then the leader gives an order and all retreat rapidly to the denser parts of the forest.

When traveling these creatures have both a front and a rear guard. A half dozen powerful apes scout well in front of the main body, now inspecting the woods from the ground, now climbing to the tops of the tallest trees.

If the traveler comes on a tribe of baboons he usually sees only one of the scouts, which bares his teeth savagely, barks once and is gone. Further away the hunter may observe the whipping of branches as the rest of the tribe retreat so rapidly that no man can overtake them. Should the observer happen upon the rear guard he will notice that they behave differently from the scouts. Not silent or cautious, they constantly give quick, sharp commands, now chiding some lagging youngster or giving another a slap and a bite.

As far as we know, the baboons are the only apes or other animals that post a sentry at night. Commonly they sleep in caves among the cliffs, and when all have retired you may be sure that one of their number will be wide awake sitting on some exposed rock or other point of vantage.

Not even the leopard, the most determined foe of the baboon, dares to attack them at night unless he can kill the sentry.

Want a Warship? There are about two hundred obsolete warships which the Admiralty want to sell lying in ports around the British Isles.

Anyone can buy a battleship or light cruiser if he is willing to give a guarantee that it will be broken up and not used for war purposes.

Every part of a ship is dismantled and disposed of, and all the delicate scientific instruments are sold. It takes forty men twelve months to break up a warship. Those ready for disposal belong to the 1906 to 1908 classes, and include Dreadnoughts and lesser types of vessels.

SUIT OVER CUCUMBERS

Interesting Division Court Case Filed at Delhi—Wm. Davies Company Sued by Harmon McCready.

Delhi, Nov. 11.—A suit with a special interest for farmers, was heard in Division court here on Thursday, when Harmon McCready brought action against the Wm. Davies Company, Toronto, to recover damages resulting from the alleged refusal of the defendant company to receive cucumbers grown by plaintiff and delivered at their pickling station here. Evidence showed that McCready, with the other growers, was notified about September 2 that owing to an extraordinary crop the local station was swamped with cucumbers and that no more could be taken in until notice was given. Following this he came in with pickles, which the manager of the plant refused to have anything to do with, but which he weighed himself and placed on the platform outside the station.

On September 6 the growers were notified to resume the delivery of cucumbers at the factory, but only No. 1 stock would be taken, whereas both No. 1 and No. 2 stock were to be taken for the season, according to the verbal contract between the company's manager and the growers. McCready disclaimed receiving such notice and left his cucumbers to rot on the vines for the remainder of the season. His bill for damages included $120 in the unharvested crop. Judgment was given in favor of the defendant company, with no damages awarded.

It begins to look as if the weather sharks who have been predicting a long hard winter guessed right.

Which?

Crerar

The head of a great trading organization which unites its trading with its politics—a political theorist—has lost control of the political movement he started and is being driven into impossible positions by class rule extremists. He is under the domination of Wood, the political boss of Alberta. He would give effect to Free Trade, thus destroying Canada's industrial and economic structure.

A Vote for Crerar is a Vote for Chaos

King

So evasive that nobody knows where he actually stands on the great issues of the day. Fits his policy to suit his audiences. Talks Free Trade to the West and Protection to the East. Specializes in high-sounding phraseology. His party is pledged to a large measure of Free Trade, but fails to suggest new methods of obtaining necessary National Revenues.

A Vote for King is a Plunge in the Dark

Meighen

Easily the outstanding figure in Canadian public life to-day, and the only real leader in sight. Able, forceful, courageous, and upright in character. A statesman of demonstrated ability with broad National and Imperial vision and an unassailable record. Stands firm for the maintenance of a reasonable Protective Tariff, and aims to provide the maximum amount of profitable labour for all.
