WINTER CARE OF COLTS

The First Winter a Critical Time for Weanlings.

Two or More Colts Do Better Together—Nourishing Feeding Also an Important Factor—No Gain in Too Early Pasturing.

The first winter is a critical time in the life of a colt. The care and attention he receives during this period determines, to a great extent, his future usefulness. If he be poorly fed, neglected, and allowed to become thin and weak, it is probable he will never be as good or valuable an animal as he would have been under more favorable circumstances.

The Matter of Feeding.

In our opinion there is little danger of overfeeding at this age. While there are exceptions, it is usually safe to give a weanling all he will eat, provided he gets regular exercise; but it must be understood that he should not be given more than he will eat. It is a mistake to keep food before him all the time.

Give Best Quality of Food.

All food should be of first-class quality. Well saved timothy makes a good substitute. Hay should be fed in the necessary quantities three or four times daily, and we prefer whole cut hay for such young animals.

Let Him Get Reasonable Exercise.

He should be turned into a yard or paddock for a few hours every day that is not too rough or stormy, and the more gentle handling and lessons in leading, etc., he gets the better.

No Gain in Too Early Pasturing.

Farmers should not be in a hurry to turn their cattle out to pasture, and the more gentle handling and lessons in leading, etc., he gets the better.

All classes of stock will give better returns where a variety of food is supplied. A mixture of grain is generally better than feeding only one kind.
