MRS. ELVA RODGERS RETIRES

A Service of Thirty-five Years With "The Record" ended. Will Enjoy a Well-deserved Rest. Our Patrons Will Miss Her.

Mrs. Elva Rodgers, who for a great many years had been connected with the RECORD, on Friday last severed her association with this paper. Thirty-five years ago she came here the bride of the late J. W. Rodgers, then the editor and proprietor of this journal. About twenty-four years ago, on the death of her husband, she assumed control and for over twenty years was editor and proprietor of the RECORD, and by her work during all this period showed that in country journalism work that a woman could equal, if not actually surpass, the best effort of the sterner sex. When the Record Printing Company, Limited, was organized in the early part of 1920, and the RECORD was purchased from her, she was induced to remain, and for over two years has given the present company the benefit of her extensive experience and past service in public interests; experience that was helpful in a marked degree to the company, and a service that has been wholehearted and unselfish from every viewpoint.

Mrs. Rodgers has been desirous of retiring from the position she held for some time in order that she might be able to take a well-earned and deserved rest. The present management desires to express appreciation of Mrs. Rodgers' very efficient services rendered during the past four months and for the unselfish help given in the production of the paper. May she long be spared to enjoy her well-deserved rest from active work. An revoir but not good bye.
