Getting Back to Nature

It is pleasant to go into the country at this season of the year. There are many herds of swine by the roadside into which the evil spirit has not yet entered. There is a cordial greeting when you meet the farmer, the merchant or the mechanic. There is a welcome if you enter the farm house and there is always a hospitality, which is a delight to share. Truly, God made the country and man made the town. When you go into the country you view God's handiwork; you behold his bounty. You see the beauty with which He has adorned man's habitation. You have more reverence for Him because of his manifold goodness to the children of men. If you want to feel young again, if you want to forget care and let your thoughts gambol, if you want to learn anew the lesson of the Fatherhood of God, if you would commune with nature and learn her message, get yourself out into the country. Seek the solitude of the everlasting hills, and a day so spent will be to you a real Thanksgiving day.

Grandma Modernized

Stepping jauntily, clad in expensive simplicity, with her grey hair marcelled, her plump feet crowded into fine French slippers, her diaphanous stockings gleaming beneath her short skirt and crowned with a hat which is the last word of dainty stylishness, grandma is a revelation of the present day and a portent for the future.

There is not a line on grandma's face. It is as smooth as a baby's. It's coloring is as exact an imitation of the cream and roses of fifteen years as the skill of the beauty parlor, with its steam baths and steam rollers, and all the delicate and potent artistry and chemistry can achieve.

Yet grandma is no child. There is character in her face. She will conquer shames in her eye. She is defeating time and she knows it. No weakening succeeds in such a contest. She has dared and endured. Many a night, when she called softly from her pillow, she has spurned its lure to spend arduous hours at her dressing table. Many an afternoon, while her friends luxuriated in bridge she has "scorned delights" and submitted to the tiresome attentions of the manicure, the hairdresser and the complexion creator.

Grandma is no fool. Her philosophy of life is simple, coherent and of absolutely final authority. She recognizes that her duty is to shine and shine she will and does. She is the most dazzling ornament in the house of her husband, the supreme manifestation of his acceptance of the canon of conspicuous waste. She advertises the fact that he can afford to hire servants, to spend lavishly on and in his residence, and, above all, to keep this idle woman to show off his wealth in the expensiveness of her attire, her ornaments and her make-up. Grandma upholds this scheme of life and considers that her ill-fated sisters who share with their husbands the toil and peril of human life have failed where she has succeeded. She regards them with compassion and contempt.

She is not a wife, a comrade for a man. She is not a mother, denying herself that her children may thrive and prosper. She is not a housewife, maintaining a gracious oasis for husband and children, and a centre of genial hospitality for friends. She "entertains," which is a pseudo-

Education in Canada

Under the British North America Act of 1867 the right to legislate on matters respecting education in Canada was reserved exclusively to the provincial legislatures. In general throughout Canada there are two fundamental systems of education, one that of the Protestant communities free from the control of religious bodies, and the other that of the Roman Catholic communities in which education is united with the religious teaching of the church. In all the provinces the cost of education is defrayed from the public revenue, provincial or local, and in some cases elementary education is absolutely free. With the exception of Quebec all the provinces have laws of compulsory school attendance, uniformity in the training of teachers, text books and the grading of children. Upon application the provincial government gives immediate financial assistance for the erection of new schools where settlement warrants this or increased attendance demands a larger edifice. Each year thousands of new schools are built throughout the length of the country especially in the ever growing western provinces. Assistance in the payment of teachers is given by a system of grants. Home study, manual instruction, school gardens, domestic science and technical education have been taken up energetically, while agriculture, which after all is the country's prime interest forms an important item in the curriculum of all schools.

In the cities and towns of the Dominion no expense is spared in the erection of handsome, spacious school buildings, where health conditions are the prime consideration and they form no mean part in the aggregate of Canada's fine public structures. Solicitude is exerted in the health and the general welfare of the pupils in the plans of construction, and medical officers and health nurses supervise the general well-being when they are in operation.

In the rural districts naturally there is the first settlement schools are often widely separated. School facilities do not exist in the same perfection, though everything is done by the education departments to meet the more difficult conditions and the child of the farmer need not fall far behind his city brother in the progress of learning. The majority of the schools are ungraded, that is several small classes are taught by the one teacher, and the districts are of such dimensions as to make the school house easily accessible from the furthest limits. Fully trained teachers are provided from the provincial normal schools; attendance is compulsory as in the cities.

(1) Macdonald College, Ste. Anne de Bellevue, P.Q., where many Canadian teachers are trained.
 (2) At the Agricultural College, Olds, Alta.
 (3) A Group of Pupils at a Rural School in Western Canada.

Every province possesses finely equipped agricultural colleges with up-to-date facilities of scientific farming experts where the most progressive and modern methods of agriculture are taught and where the degree of Bachelor of Scientific Agriculture is conferred at graduation. As it is impossible for many of the sons and daughters of farmers to attend all the year round and complete the courses, winter sessions are held in every province where short courses are given imparting a thorough training to boys and girls over the public school age in intelligent farming and scientific methods, domestic science and other phases of farm work. These courses have proved of immense interest and value and are widely appreciated by agricultural communities whilst the attendance is yearly increased as the benefits to be derived from these short courses are the more fully realized.

There is virtually no limit to educational facilities in the Dominion and the child having completed public and high school courses may go further and has twenty-six universities to choose from, ten in Ontario, four each in Quebec and Nova Scotia, two each in New Brunswick and Saskatchewan and one each in Alberta, British Columbia, Manitoba and Prince Edward Island. Through the Rhodes Scholarships these young Canadians have the opportunity of entry into the colleges of Oxford and Cambridge fostering the Imperial union and continuing their scholarship with students from every part of the globe. Some of the Canadian universities, notably McGill at Montreal and Toronto University have won world-wide reputations and furnished European universities with professors.

hospitality, and amounts to an exchange and rivalry of social pageantry and dissipation. She has quite definite convictions regarding the social order. She attends infrequent committee meetings for the disposal of her husband's and other husbands' money on socially accredited lines to the docile poor. She dreads and detests "labor agitators" whom she considers a demon-possessed race engaged in lashing overpaid workers into reasonless fury for their own gratification and profit. She considers the income tax an iniquity and thinks it a monstrous crime that so few farmers pay it. Most of all she hates and fears any disturbance of the present conditions, which are highly agreeable to her, and pronounces any suggestion to a change to be socialistic and bolshevistic.

A mighty power is grandma, occupying a position of eminence and authority. Many useful women envy and copy her in her idleness and vanity. Yet she is but a caricature of a wholesome and worthy old age, a sinister indication of the decadence of the aete she ornaments and betrays.
