Immigration Problems

The above is a subject on which one might write indefinitely upon. Canada is one of the countries to which immigration means much. In the past too much stress has been laid upon quantity, and quality has been neglected in a very alarming degree.

Canada's immigration needs are important and should not be left to mere chance. Our immigration offices in the European centres should have accurate and up-to-date information as to the number and class of immigrants that are desired.

Canada need immigrants to-day more than ever she did, but wants only that class of people who will assimilate with their new surroundings, and take their places as worthy people in a worthy land.

But immigration must be regulated and not left in the slightest degree to chance. There has been too much left to chance in the past and we now get the results. Immigration brings about all classes. The fit and the unfit, the desirable and the undesirable, the law abiding and the lawless.

themselves, they suffer hardship and disappointment. What we need is a class of people who are acquainted with farming and conditions surrounding that occupation.

But if we are to invite people to come out to Canada and take up land, the conditions ought to be made as favorable as possible. Far too much of our land is held idle and newcomers are forced to go in regions where the land is not the best and the haul to the railways too far for them in order to realize on their products to best advantage.

Railways depend to a marked degree upon the farmers to earn their expenses and pay dividends on stock. In a like manner the farmers are dependent on the railways, more especially so in the western provinces. They are looking for lower freight rates and certainly ought to receive substantial relief along this line.

Farmers who come to Canada to take up land must not be allowed to become discontented, for if they do they will become enemies of immigration instead of helping it. Our tariff should be so revised so as to help farming and all its basic industries.

Canada need immigrants to-day more than ever she did, but wants only that class of people who will assimilate with their new surroundings, and take their places as worthy people in a worthy land.

Britain's Debt to the U.S.A.
The following article by Mr. T. B. Macaulay, of Montreal, appeared in the New York "Independent and Weekly Review." We publish it as it was printed:

"The suggestion has from time to time been made in a number of the leading journals of the United States that Great Britain should transfer her West Indian colonies and Bermuda in part payment of her American debt.

With the naval, military and financial resources then at her back, what would she have cared for the Monroe Doctrine?
We do not claim that the United States should have entered the war at its outbreak, for the people had not been sufficiently informed as to the merits of the struggle, prior to the Lusitania incident.

Without your aid the combatants were too evenly matched, especially as one side had been preparing for years and the other had not. The struggle continued till all were bled white.

"When at last you threw your vast power into the scales, that great addition to the cause of civilization and righteousness was decisive. When you did set, you acted vigorously, wholeheartedly and effectively.

"If we Canadians are right in believing that the United States had as great a stake in the war before she entered it as afterwards, do you wonder that we ask ourselves whether it is fair that the Allies should bear alone the crushing financial burden of those earlier years during your people accumulated much of the wealth of the world? Surely their awful losses in life, before the United States lost a single man, are enough of a handicap.

"But the case is much stronger. The money borrowed in the United States before April, 1917, is not in question. The American government naturally did not give any credits to the Allies till after it had itself entered the war.

"Americans are a proud people. I know they do not wish, in this matter, to stand on legal technicalities. In coming to a decision, let them remember the stakes they actually had in the early years of the war, and the purpose for which the money was borrowed in the later years.

"The suggestion has been made that even if the war debts be not cancelled, the United States might accept from Great Britain a transfer of an equal amount of the debts owing to Britain by other Allied countries. That might be fair to Britain, but how about the others? Do Americans think that either Britain or the United States should exact payment from France, which has bled at every pore? What would they think if Britain were to demand a transfer of some of the old French colonies in return for cancelling the debt of France to her? Britain will probably cancel the debts owing to her by her Allies without bargaining or reward. Can the United States afford to be less generous?

"Lists of territories have been quoted, chiefly tropical, which have been as a result of the war placed under British control. Many of these will be, for years to come, bills of expense. In any case, the Allies would gladly have given to the United States a generous share in these allotments, had she been willing to accept. Even at this late date it is probably not impossible for her to obtain a share in the mandates, but of course she would be expected to assume the expense and responsibilities of governing, defending and developing these territories, and not merely to share in any commercial benefits that might accrue.

"The proposal, however, that Britain should transfer the British West Indies and Bermuda is something very different. To transfer these ancient colonies would be to begin the dismemberment of the Empire. Is that to be Britain's reward? Even if the Mother Country should be willing, which I am sure she would not, there are two further objections. I know these Colonies fairly well. They are incurably British, and would violently protest at being taken out of the British family and transferred as if they were mere property.

"It would not be fitting for a Canadian to speak here of Canada's sacrifices or services in the war. But of all the allied nations that were in the war from the beginning, Canada alone has neither asked nor received reward of any kind. No charge of selfishness can be made against us. We ask nothing, and want nothing. But we would protest against any settlement that would positively injure us, such as the transfer of our tropical partners to another nation.

"One of the strongest desires held by responsible men in Canada is to do their share in drawing ever closer the bonds of friendship between Canada, the American member of the British Federation of Nations, and our great neighbor. To this end each should have a knowledge of the other's views and a sympathetic respect for the other's rights. For this reason, I have ventured to set forth, what I think, the Canadian attitude on these questions."

"Americans are a proud people. I know they do not wish, in this matter, to stand on legal technicalities. In coming to a decision, let them remember the stakes they actually had in the early years of the war, and the purpose for which the money was borrowed in the later years."
