Mastering a New Sport

The problem of human flight having been satisfactorily solved, ingenious persons are now trying to "aviate" without an engine, and already they have made remarkable progress in this new art.

If one observes a man-of-war sailing far aloft in the empyrean, now moving in great circles and now seemingly stationary, without so much as a flap of his wings for hours together, one wonders how he does it.

It is, however, no secret. He is upheld by the power of the wind, which he utilizes by opposing his wings to it.

It is this principle which Hiental sought to utilize thirty years ago. That pioneer in aviation equipped himself with a motorless machine...

One of them named Klemmer, on July 30 last, flew in a motorless machine from the top of a high hill called the Wasserkuppe to the village of Gersfeld, a distance of six miles, in thirteen minutes and three seconds.

Only 5 per cent. of the soldiers on farms who were given assistance by the Soldier Settlement Board had had previous agricultural experience.

CHAPTER I.—(Cont'd.) Dave led into the old ranch house, kicking the door wider open with his heel as he passed.

"Now," said the boy, "I'm goin' for the doctor. It's forty miles to town, and I'll likely be mornin' before I'm back, but I'll sure burn the trail. You'd have to make the best of it."

"Oh, I'll stand it," said Doctor Hardy, with some cheerfulness. "We medical men become accustomed to suffering—in other people. You are very kind to have expressed your sympathy for me in this room. I suppose there is no one else?"

"No one but the old man," he answered. "He's asleep in the next room, safe till mornin'." "By that time," said the boy, "indicating a corner, "Make yourselves at home." He lunged through the door and they heard his spurs clanking across the hard earth.

The girl's first thought was to assure as much comfort for her father as the circumstances would permit. She removed his boot and stocking, and, under his direction, slit the leg of his trousers above the injury. It was bleeding a little. In the large room of the house she found a tin with water, and she bathed the wound, wiping it with her handkerchief, and mingling a tear or two with the warm blood that dripped from it.

"Oh, you dear Daddykins," she replied, her voice tremulous with self-reproach. "I had forgotten. There was soap, or something, just under me in the window; that's a good idea, blaming one's negligence on a spell. I must remember that. But the bandage?" "Dear me; the only thing I can see in the kitchen towel, and I can't remember it. But what a goose I am! Our grips are in the car, or under it, or somewhere. I'll be back in a jiffy." And she was off at a sharp trot down the trail along which she had so recently come in Dave Elden's wagon.

At the little stream she paused. A single log was the only bridge, and although the water was not deep it ran swiftly, and still with the coldness of a glacier source. She ventured along the log, but she felt the water was seized with an acute sense of her temerity. Perhaps she had been foolish in attempting this passage without the aid of a stick. A stick, which she placed inside a vacuum tube containing a fluoride window, and connected by almost invisible wires to a galvanometer consisting of a fine coil of wire and a tiny swinging mirror.

The tube is then placed inside a large astronomical telescope, which is set so that the rays of the star will fall upon the joint. Because of the different properties of the two metals—bismuth and platinum—an electric current is generated. The current flows through the galvanometer, and the mirror is moved according to the amount of heat that has played upon the joint.

To maintain as perfect a vacuum as possible, the tube is surrounded with calcium, which absorbs the air. Fluorite windows are used because fluorite is always transparent; some rays cannot penetrate glass.

Twilight Caused by Dust! For an hour after the sun has set, it is still light enough in this country for us to see quite well; and in the early morning, the twilight begins to come along before the sun makes its appearance.

Twilight occurs only in countries that are situated at some distance from the Equator. In India darkness falls quite suddenly—as soon as the sun dips below the horizon.

The reason is that in latitudes like our own the air is charged with tiny particles of dust and moisture, which one can see in the mists of a sunbeam. When the sun has set its rays no longer fall upon the surface of the land, but continue for some time to strike the masses of particles floating high in the air.

Each of these acts as a minute reflector, receiving sunlight and sending it downwards. As the sun sinks farther and farther below the horizon its rays strike the particles higher up in the air, and the light, having a greater thickness of atmosphere to penetrate, becomes gradually dimmer.

At sunrise the process is reversed: the first faint light coming to us from mists floating many miles above the earth.

Tiny Tower Bridge. A wonderful modelling feat has been accomplished by a Chicago manufacturer of pipe fittings.

He has constructed a model of the Tower Bridge in London, from valves and fittings of his own make. The model is to be used for display purposes in his London office.

It is nineteen feet long, eleven feet high, four feet wide, and each span measures fifty-seven inches, and there is a lift in each of the towers.

The model consists of 15,358 pieces of piping of 230 different kinds, and 16,251 joints were used. Special machinery raises the arms of the bridge and the lifts.

Thirty-six electric lamps light the bridge, while colored lights regulate the bridges and water traffic.

So There! "Daisy," remarked her Sunday School teacher, "don't love your cat too much. What would you do if it died, you wouldn't see it again?" "Oh, yes, teacher, I should see it in heaven." "No, dear, you're mistaken; animals can't go to heaven like people."

Daisy's eyes filled with tears, but suddenly she exclaimed triumphantly, "Animals do go to heaven, for the Bible says the Promised Land is flowing with milk and honey. And, if there are no animals, where do they get the milk?"
