GOING AND GROWING SERVICE

Progressive Spirit Being Shown by United Lines, Ltd.

For many years the steam railways had complete control of the freight problems, and in conjunction with their subsidiary branches (the express companies) have controlled the rates on all goods that had to be moved any distance. Consequently the public have had to pay just what these great corporations have seen fit to levy as their charges for the transportation from one point to another of the goods in transit. But a new era has dawned and the great railway companies are fast losing the monopoly they have held for so many years. The motor-driven vehicles are fast reaching the point of perfection and have already made considerable inroads in the freight business of the country. Up to a few years ago the moving of furniture and household effects was all done by the steam lines. This necessitated many delays and it would be several days before a family could be settled in their new home. But now-a-days, thanks to the motor truck development a move of one hundred miles can be made the same day, and those making the change can be settled in their new home the same day they leave the old one. Ninety per cent. of moving is now done by motor truck. The motor truck is here to stay.

The United Lines, Limited, with headquarters at Hamilton, have announced that on after November 1st a daily freight service will be established between Hamilton, Caledonia, Hagersville, Cayuga, Canfield, Dunnville and all way points. This enterprising and rapidly growing company have had their engineers and traffic experts making surveys of the volume of freight traffic in the territory south of Hamilton during the past weeks and they claim that there is very great room for improvement in the daily delivery of freight for the merchants and general shipping public, and more particularly for farmers, whose farms are adjacent to their various lines. Freight trucks will leave Dunnville, Cayuga, Hagersville and Caledonia early in the morning, and returning will leave Hamilton in the early afternoon, delivering the freight that has been ordered by phone or mail in the forenoon to the outlying points in the afternoon of the same day. This means that an express service will be given the public at freight rates. At present a freight bus will not be put on between Hagersville and Jarvis. However, it is expected that very shortly the road to Simcoe will have been completed and open for traffic, when it is expected that the United Lines, Limited, will put their cross country line into operation, making our village an important junction point of the system. Then the freight service will be extended automatically. The United Lines, Ltd. are doing a great work for the people and are deserving of the most generous treatment at the hands of the public, they are so ably serving. If you desire to help out our transportation problems and develop our district the last degree, you can do so by patronizing the United Lines service, whether it be passenger or freight. Be loyal and give a helping hand to the company that is doing so much for you and the particular district you live in.

PERSONALS

A Respected Resident Removed

Mrs. Jane Davis Called Home

Mrs. Jane Davis, an old resident of this community, who was well-known and highly respected, passed away in Hamilton on Sunday morning last. The body brought to Jarvis on Tuesday afternoon. Service was held in Wesley Methodist Church. Rev. Ray R. Smith, Brantford, a former pastor, who had known the deceased, paid a beautiful tribute of the value and beauty of character possessed by the late Mrs. Davis, who was formerly a member of Jarvis Church. Rev. C. R. Morrow, of Hamilton, also a former pastor of the deceased, was unable to be present, but sent a message of condolence which was read by Rev. G. Smitherman, to the many friends who were present at the service. The following is the letter: "The funeral of a member of my own church prevents my being with you today. I would much like to have voiced my tributes of respect for Mrs. Davis in the church she attended for so many years. Here was a beautiful life. She belonged to God's nobility. When I became acquainted with her thirty-three years ago she was a widow. How she kept up the home, gave her children an education, and inspired them with high ideals, seems like a fairy tale. Some years ago an accident made it impossible for her to walk again; then word came that her grandson had fallen in the great strife; and worse still, Dr. Annis, the beloved physician, was called hence. I often visited her during those tragic times, and always found her marvellously patient and her faith sublime. As I looked at her the other day the poet's words came to my mind: "When earth last saw them they were bleeding, Thorns crowned and sore preplexed; They shall be changed and beautiful exceeding, When we shall see them next." "The pain, the distress, the mystery is forever gone. Never again will the know weakness or weariness. Never will pain rack her body. She's beautiful exceeding" now. She's beyond the limits of the mortal. "He only can undo it, And open wide the door; And mortals who pass through it, Are mortals never more." "Sister Davis is not dead. "While the Eternal liveth, We do err to call her dead; She's but left time's dusky borders, For the Golden Gates ahead." At the close of the church service the remains were conveyed to the cemetery, where interment was made.

PLEASE SHUT THE DOOR

If you are holding the door half open, Don't say your wife is so crabby; For you're letting the flies come in. So don't get that filthy old habit.

CHORTS

For it's nice to make the sun to shine. It is nice to drive away gloom; Then open the door of your heart. But shut the door of the room; Room! Room! Room! But shut the door of the room. And when you go into a house, Please shut the door with a will; For it is to make the impression, That you was born in a mill. Saw mills are getting quite scarce, Saw dust don't cover our floor. The man who lives in a saw mill, Will never say 'please shut the door.' Nanticoke, Ont. T. BUTCHER.
