Growth of Hair After Death.—Another remarkable case of the growth of hair after burial came to light yesterday at the disinterment of the body of Mr. Samuel Bowlby, who died in Southwold in May, 1887, and was buried in Tablotville cemetery. When Mr. Bowlby died his beard was about four inches long, and the hair upon his head was the usual length worn during life. When the coffin was taken up yesterday by his son-in-law, Mr. J. Learn, for reburial in Mapleton cemetery, it was discovered that the beard had grown to the length of eighteen inches.—St. Thomas Times.

An Enjoyable Gathering

Local Members of the U. F. O. and U. F. W. O. and Friends Have Successful Gathering—Over 300 Enjoy Oyster Supper

The following report was prepared for publication in the Jarvis Record and we gladly give it space. While this paper is independent we are always prepared to give publicity to similar gatherings.
Jarvis, January 26th, 1923.—If anybody had a doubt about the growth and strength of the United Farmers, in and around this section he should have been at the Oyster Supper given by the local club in the Mus's Hall on the evening of January 26th. Chatham Hall will hold a crowd and on this happy occasion it was used to the full. Crowds, as a rule, come here a tired, what-coming-next look about them; not so with the crowd in this fine old building last night. Singly and collectively each had a smile that don't come off; the healthy well kept appearance of a people who had found a cure for most of their ills and had taken advantage of it by joining with their fellow neighbors in the U. F. O. Time has gone by when workers in the vineyard are awed by some slick individual, who comes among them every 6 or 7 years as "the candidate" and by a great show of handshaking and clapping on the back catches the popular ear; then waves a five dollar note as he leaves the crowd shouting and thankful that they had elected him to save them from "that" year from what does the Candidate who has usually been a lawyer, a doctor, a brewer, or a manufacturer of some kind, try to save the agriculturalist. He always looked down upon as easily bamboozled buyers of wood and drawers of water, who attended attendance, and how hard a crack of the old-time party whip. To-day the party was for themselves. They had elected that if they were done they were done they were done.

These organizations, the farmers, and many, many right-thinking men in all walks of life are gathering prodigious force all over this broad land. Already we travel dry shod and comfortable over roads which formerly held us fast on the mirey clay. Already we have developed our self respect and find that we are the equal mentally, physically and in all the accomplishments, of any class of humans on earth. Already the ploughman, like the immortal Robert Burns, is coming into his own. Already the arm-chair toiler is reading the "writing on the wall" and the soft spots they have so long been using will know them no more.
After supper was over Mr. McCurdy, the U. F. O. general stock salesman gave a splendid address on the business in his line, and advised especially that it is better to raise four first class animals than eight or ten inferior ones. Quality not quantity is the watchword.
Mrs. Laws gave a nice talk on the benefits of the U. F. O. and drew attention to the part the women are playing in this great effort of the people to have something to say about the government and management of their own.

The Messrs Miller, gave a piano duet.
Miss Norma Stallwood gave a vocal solo.
The Messrs Fallis and Miss Maggie Fallis gave a trio.
Mr. Irwin played the accordion and Mr. and Mrs. Al. Marr violin and piano. Everyone of these artists showed talent equal to any call and very sweetly to each request.
Mr. Bert Stallwood gave a pretty good sample of step dancing. He appeared a little bashful at first being a U. F. O., but soon hopped to it like dandy Jim from Caroline. Bert shared in the records and responded as only a Methodist can.

The supper was just right, even the oysters felt an honor to be swallowed by such a large and enthusiastic audience.
These meetings should be held oftener. They keep the importance of the organization before the members and people generally. They are absolutely necessary for the success of any business. Keep up the good work, fight the good fight and remember—that the other folks might get you, if you don't watch out.
