BIG DEMONSTRATION IS HELD IN PORT DOVER TO HONOR NEW MINISTER

Hon. J. S. Martin is Greeted by Hundreds of friends After Being Sworn In to Head Agricultural Department of Ontario.

A Better Way For Farmers

"I believe there is a better way than that of forming a farmer's party. I hope to find it. I believe that I have been given a great opportunity. I aim to do something, and I am starting with the sincere desire to prove worthy of the trust that you and the Prime Minister have imposed in me."

The Globe Report Says:

Hon. John S. Martin, Ontario's new Minister of Agriculture, returned today from taking his Ministerial oath of office at Government House, Toronto, to meet his old folk in the lakeside village of Port Dover.

WILT TACKLE IMMIGRATION

The problem of immigration, Mr. Martin stated, was another which would have his immediate attention.

WILT TACKLE IMMIGRATION

"There is nothing," he declared, amid exclamations of "hear, hear," "that so breaks a farmer's heart as to have crops ready for harvest and be unable to get help necessary to harvest them."

"Old friends and fellow-citizens," he began, after he had passed to his wife the bouquet of roses presented to him by a pretty little girl in white and they cheered again. "I thank you

Hon. John S. Martin, Ontario's new Minister of Agriculture, returned today from taking his Ministerial oath of office at Government House, Toronto, to meet his old folk in the lakeside village of Port Dover.

WILT TACKLE IMMIGRATION

The problem of immigration, Mr. Martin stated, was another which would have his immediate attention.

WILT TACKLE IMMIGRATION

"There is nothing," he declared, amid exclamations of "hear, hear," "that so breaks a farmer's heart as to have crops ready for harvest and be unable to get help necessary to harvest them."

WILT TACKLE IMMIGRATION

"Old friends and fellow-citizens," he began, after he had passed to his wife the bouquet of roses presented to him by a pretty little girl in white and they cheered again. "I thank you for this wonderful gathering. No one who was human could help being moved by it. I appreciate it from the bottom of my heart. There is nothing in the world that a man likes better than to stand well with the people among whom he lives. You have given me a wonderful opportunity. I owe it to you to give this sincere desire to prove worthy and I pledge you my best efforts."

Job Sought The Man. And, after this personal word, this intimate greeting, this direct pledge, the Minister of Agriculture addressed himself to a frank and constructive discussion of the Provincial work awaiting him. Without preliminaries he plunged into a statement of his aims and projects. He had never asked or sought by deputation, by intercession, by a single letter, for the position. Unexpectedly it had been offered to him—a new and untried member. He felt it an opportunity, for he believed that Ontario was essentially a farming Province and that if agriculture prospered every other business prospered and that many things could be done for the farming interests of Ontario.

"May I speak plainly?" he asked. "I am not an agriculturist. I'm a farmer. I was given the opportunity of joining the United Farmers of Ontario. I did not do so, because I never believed in politics. I would never knock any movement for the benefit of the farmers, and yet I felt that we farmers could never achieve lasting results and become a political group ourselves. That is not the way to bring about reform and betterment. All classes are dependent upon one another. Surely the best must come by all classes working together."

A Better Way For Farmers. "I believe there is a better way than that of forming a farmer's party. I hope to find it. I believe that I have been given a great opportunity. I aim to do something, and I am starting with the sincere desire to prove worthy of the trust that you and the Prime Minister have imposed in me."

There was nothing, Mr. Martin stated, which he had deplored more than the division which so often seemed to exist between the town and the country. One of the big needs of our Province, he said, is better and closer understanding between the people of our cities and the people of our country. This is one thing I shall earnestly endeavor to bring about. The country, and I say it as a farmer, is not always in the right. The city, and I have felt it as a farmer, is not always in the right. Both city and country must strive to get the other's point of view. I believe that something can be done by better solving the problem of rural education. Fifty years ago Denmark faced a situation not dissimilar to that which confronts Ontario today. Three fifths of her population was living in the cities, and more was steadily crowding thither. The solution was found largely in the education of the boys and girls of Denmark—an improved condition of rural education. The result has been most satisfactory.

Situation Completely Reversed. "Today sixty per cent of Denmark's population is living in the country and forty per cent in the city, and the better adjustment still goes on. Meanwhile Danish butter and bacon have taken first place on the British market, and other products of Danish agriculture are rapidly winning their place in the markets of the Old World. Agriculture is the business of Denmark, as I believe it to be the main business of Ontario.

"There is work, I believe, waiting for me in this regard," proceeded the Minister of Agriculture. "And I am going to give it my earnest endeavor. I believe that education and agriculture should be linked very closely together in the tasks of Provincial administration, and educational policies framed to co-operate with and promote the improvement of agricultural conditions. I may say that, on mentioning my view to the new Prime Minister, I received every encouragement as to his intentions. (Applause.)

Wilt Tackle Immigration. The problem of immigration, Mr. Martin stated, was another which would have his immediate attention. He believed that the Provincial immigration had fallen down. Farmers had cried for help, without avail. "There is nothing," he declared, amid exclamations of "hear, hear," "that so breaks a farmer's heart as to have crops ready for harvest and be unable to get help necessary to harvest them." In the county of Norfolk during the past season, application had been made for 150 of the 250
