He had intended reassuring the mandarin on his nephew's American upbringing, adding the pleasing information that he was an old friend of Paul's foster-parents, but at that moment chimes pealed out. A swishing of garments and soft pattering of feet sounded and in filed a column of men.

Weng Toy rose. The ruby was re-attached to the gold wire and in a moment was glowing in its alabaster setting. The guard had lined up inside the temple and bowed themselves to the ground as the mandarin and David passed out.

After partaking of tea in the big reception hall, David took his departure. Weng Toy consented to part with him at such an early hour as two a.m., only on the understanding that he would make a second visit very soon.

As David sped into the night in the mandarin's modern up-to-date car, the Oriental's sacred oath of friendship, the brave deeds of gallant young Culver, yes, even the ruby in the temple, faded to insignificance in the memory of a pair of smiling blue eyes. Alas, for his Spartan resolutions of the evening—the romance of the East was fast absorbing them.

heat, but by following certain precautions one can be safe against this poisoning. The symptoms of botulism are: gas bubbles in the jar, the liquid squirting from the jar as it is opened; an odor resembling rancid cheese; and a mushy appearance of the food. Remember that cleanliness of utensils, hands and food, is necessary for successful canning. Bacteria are more abundant in dirt. Never can anything that is spoiled, overripe or bruised, and follow religiously the directions about blanching and processing, and how to do it. One woman lost eight quarts of asparagus because she placed pie tins in the bottom of her boiler, with no provision for circulation beneath the jars. It is better to be safe than sorry when canning.

Weng Toy arose, an eager look on his face, and something red flashed from the hand he reached towards David.

David bent forward. An exclamation escaped him as he peered into the brilliant, scintillating depths of an immense ruby.

"There is only one other equal to it in the world," confided the mandarin. David's eyes wandered from the jewel to the head of the image, where now in place of the red light loomed a dense shadow.

"This stone," continued Weng Toy, "has been handed down through my line from the time of Woo Wang. I repeat, there is one other as magnificent, an exact counterpart, a twin. The Prince Too, my cousin, had it in his keeping, but it will soon be—if it is not already—in the possession of my nephew."

"A lucky chap, Mr. Weng Toy. I have seen numerous rare jewels, but never did I believe such perfect beauty existed in a stone until now. This, I presume, accounts for the strong guard you have here?"—and David glanced around at the forms in the shadows of the temple.

"Yes, a guard of thirty men is posted here day and night. They retire only to be replaced by thirty more."

As he lifted the jewel from the extended hand of the mandarin, it seemed to David the warm lights flashing forth from the stone radiated by gone life. It was as if thoughts, that had never died, living ties with the innumerable dead, the brave men of the Chow dynasty, were still clinging to that pulsating piece of antiquity.

Across the brilliant surface of the stone, in cameo-like relief, was an inscription in delicate Chinese script.

"This is perhaps the motto of your house, Mr. Weng Toy?" questioned David.

The mandarin shook his head. "That is a sacred inscription. The meaning in your language, Captain Marsden, is 'The All Seeing Eye.'"

The bacteria are the hardest to kill. Some of them are able to grow inside of a can, away from the air, but most of them remain dormant unless there is a leak in the can. Acid, salt, and sugar are preservatives of food, and help in canning. They are the only legitimate preservatives. The wise housewife will not use canning powders, but will be scrupulously careful in having food clean and well processed. A neighbor told the writer that she always used a canning powder for tomatoes. In this way she was endangering the health of her family, since some canning powders contain 95 per cent. boric acid. I have never yet had a can of tomatoes spoil, either using the old-fashioned way or the cold-pack method.
