ports, but should endeavor to eliminate the enormous duplication that exists by the deputy minister of justice; the solicitor-general rarely, if ever, goes to court; and there is not a duty or a task in his office which could not be performed by the officials of the Department of Justice.

Such an amalgamation, if carried out, would reduce the present cabinet of fourteen ministers to a cabinet of nine ministers. It would mean not alone the saving of salaries of five ministers; it would almost certainly save hundreds of thousands of dollars annually through the reductions of staffs and the greater efficiency and mobility that amalgamation of departments would involve.

3. The Civil Service Act should be amended to give (a) deputy ministers more control over their staffs and more voice in promotions, and (b) to secure some elastic system under which employees may be transferred quickly from one department to another; this to replace the present system under which, largely because of the red-tape in securing extra help, a department in need of extra help rarely seeks it from another department, but advertises for additional employees.

4. Some kind of board or committee should be established which would exercise the same control or check upon the growth of the staffs of departments that is exercised by the time compels heads of departments to appear before it and show cause why their staffs should not be reduced, or why extra help taken on in cannot be dispensed with. In this way overmanning is prevented. A similar control should be and could be established in Ottawa.

5. Civil Servants should be compelled to work at least seven and a half instead of six and a half hours each day; a stop should be put to the practice whereby the whole administrative machinery of the country ceases on every church holiday; and the four o'clock closing hour in summer time should be abolished.

6. The system whereby the Civil Service is scattered all over Ottawa, thus prohibiting efficiency, should be abolished as soon as practicable. Departments should be consolidated; duplication of effort abolished; and rentals, where and when necessary, should be placed upon a business-like basis.

7. The War Purchasing Commission should be restored and placed upon a basis independent of partisanship and patronage. It should have charge of all important government purchases (apart from petty departmental transactions) and have full power to obtain all government supplies and material solely upon the principle of good business.

8. An editorial committee should be given wide powers to supervise, edit and restrict government publications. It should not only co-operate with departmental heads in restricting the size of government reports of veto in respect of the publica-

9. There should be a committee of the House of Commons to deal with estimates, such as is the case in England. This committee, which should be composed of the best men of all three parties, should consider all estimates solely upon their merits. It would not be easy to free it entirely of partizan considerations, or of other obvious weaknesses; yet I am convinced that it would exercise a potent check upon the "Pork Barrel," and that it would in large measure prevent all kinds of expenditure being rushed through the House without adequate consideration in the dying days of the session.

Just a word in conclusion. In these

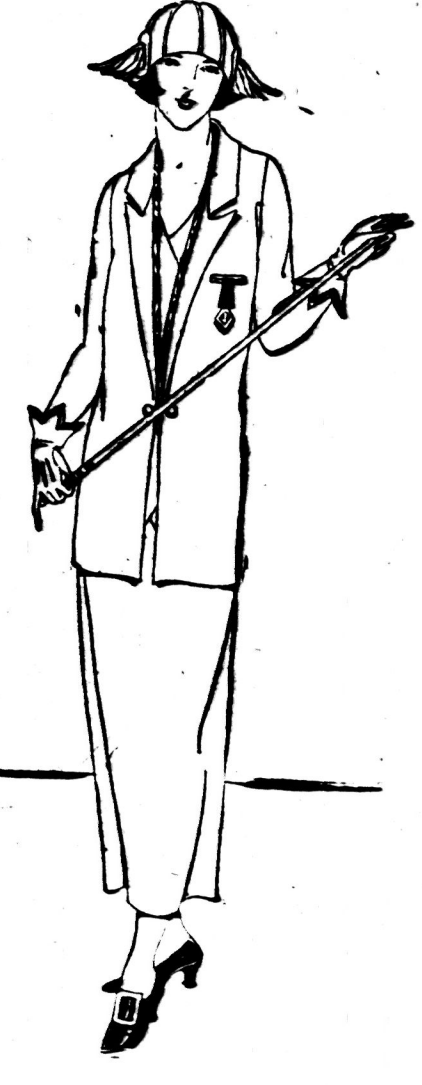

I have not written for or against any party or group or faction, but have merely tried to contribute something worthwhile to the discussion of a national problem. How far I have succeeded it is for my readers to judge; my own parting word must be with Byron:
 "What is writ, is writ;
 Would that it were worthier!"

DON'T FORGET
HOLSTEIN BREEDERS' ANNUAL SALE
 Will be held at
KNOX'S FEED BARN, HAGERSVILLE, THURS. APRIL 3, 1924

The Club has got together a very nice assignment of cattle that will average considerably better than those of previous sales. Knowing that buying is the most prosperous of all farm industries, and feeling that many farmers might wish to either increase the numbers of their dairy herds, or to increase the average production of the year, we have selected cattle that should appeal to the inclinations of the buying public. The bulls are all of serviceable age and of good quality but are few in number. 95% of cattle are from herds either fully accredited or from those under accreditation. All sold subject to reliable tuberculin test. Sale to begin at 12:30 p.m.
