Cast Vote on Prohibition October 23

The prohibition issue will be before the people of Ontario on October 23. On that date the electors of this province will express their opinions on questions intended to guide the Government as to the Ontario Temperance Act or some other form of legislation relative to the sale of intoxicants. Political observers look for one of the most strenuously conducted plebiscite elections in the history of this part of Canada.

The machinery for taking the vote will be similar to that of the last provincial general election. Returning officers will be appointed by the Government for each electoral district, who in turn will name deputies for each sub-division. In municipalities where the voters' lists are completed in time, these will be used. It is expected that in most of the rural sub-divisions these lists will be ready in plenty of time. In the larger cities, however, where the lists are not usually completed until near the end of the year, the 1923 lists will be employed. In each case the lists will be subject to the usual revisions under the supervision of the local election boards, which are composed of the permanent officers of the Crown under the chairmanship of the county's judges. Every British subject, 21 years of age or over, resident in Canada for a year and a resident in the polling sub-division for three months, will be entitled to vote. The usual provisions apply in respect of persons who move from one sub-division to another.

The Real Producer of Wealth!

We sometimes hear people discuss successful men and hear this one or that one lauded as a real benefactor. It may be John D. Rockefeller, Henry Ford, John Wannamaker, or some other great man in business, or it may be some genius, whose mind has solved great problems in giving us inventions, or some master of art, but seldom do we hear the men in the humble professions of farming and mining classed among the great. But after all, when the whole matter is summed up, and due credit given where due, we are sure that the farmer and the miner deserve their wreaths of distinction along with others, and the miner deserves the highest place of all.

The manufacturer takes a tree and makes a piece of furniture, or a house, or a wagon, and thinks he has added to the wealth of the world, but he only used something that already was and made it into something else; a fire is kindled and the thing he has made is soon destroyed.

The merchant amasses a fortune by buying and selling goods, but he has only dealt in something that already was and added nothing new to the world's possession.

The farmer plants a field of wheat and raises a crop. He has taken from Mother Earth something that did not exist before and given to the world its bread and meat, but unless he raises another crop next year, that which he raised this year will soon be consumed and gone forever.

But the miner goes into the hills with a pick and shovel and humbly works with bent back and dripping brow in some obscure, out of the way place. He endures hardships and lives on the simplest kind of fare, risking life and limb and suffering the chills and damp of underground, but he does not complain, nor does he get discouraged or faint-hearted.

Finally after years of toil he emerges and brings forth the shining gold and the glittering silver, adding to the world's wealth something that is real, something that never was before, that becomes an abiding thing of value, indestructible and enduring.

PAINTING AND DECORATING

Jackson's second floor is the busy spot these days for those in quest of wall papers, paints and everything for spring renovating. Quite aside from the fact that everyone understands this to be the leading store for these goods, is the fact that this year's showing of new draperies, wall paper patterns and window shades eclipses anything shown in previous seasons and the prices—well, you'll have a surprise—and a pleasant one, too.

REMEMBER THIS

Whether it is wall paper, window shades, draperies, rugs or picture framing, you can do better at Jackson's. The entire second floor is devoted to these lines with competent men in charge, able to help you make wise selections to suit if you don't know just what you desire.

Come in, talk it over with us.
