BEEKEEPERS MUST REGISTER

New legislation passed this year requires every person owning one or more colonies of bees to register with the Department of Agriculture. Any one not registered should write Mr. Milten, Provincial Apiarist, Guelph, Ont., for an application for registration. This should be done immediately as the act prescribes a penalty of from five to ten dollars for each day a person is not registered. The act also prohibits the sale or moving of hives of bees or of bee supplies without a permit. These permits can also be secured from the Provincial Apiarist. Any person selling or moving without a permit is liable to a maximum fine of one hundred dollars.

PAPER FROM STRAW

Utilization of straw in the manufacture of paper is likely to add an important industry to Western Canada and increase the revenue from the wheat fields, according to W. R. Allan, president of the Union Bank of Canada, Winnipeg.

Work will be started in a few days says Mr. Allan, on a mill which will turn out 50 tons of straw paper per day. He predicted that within twenty-five years straw will entirely take the place of pulp wood in the manufacture of paper. It is estimated that farmers will get 20 cents for straw with every bushel of wheat.

TO KEEP LOCAL TRADE HERE

Competition of outside firms can best be met by effective campaigns at home. The best way to keep the local trade of Jarvis in Jarvis is to make full use of the means of acquainting local residents with the advantages of buying at home. This means advertising.

Mail-order houses get business from here for two reasons: First, because they may have commodities which are not obtainable here; and, second, because they let the people know what they have for sale. It is possible that the first of these competitions cannot be overcome by local merchants, unless they should stock slow-moving and unprofitable merchandise and no merchant can afford to do that.

The second competition can be more easily met. The local merchants can plan advertising campaigns which will present the advantages of quality, or price, or immediate delivery so effectively that the competition of outside firms will no longer be a serious factor.

THE CALENDAR SYSTEM

A certain church in a prosperous New England State found it necessary to raise a large sum of money. The members thought with discouragement of the many suppers, food sales and fairs that they must hold in order to raise that amount. But the pastor's wife had heard of the calendar system of raising church funds and explained it as follows:

One woman becomes the Year and promises to give two dollars a month for a year; the Year chooses twelve women to be the Months, each of whom pledges one dollar a month; each Month chooses four Weeks who are to give fifty cents a month; and each Week chooses seven Days who pledge ten cents a month. The sum of $550.00 was raised by the plan in one year, and during the past five years five thousand dollars has been paid into the church treasury, nearly eighty per cent. of which was collected by the calendar system.

Working together for this cause should create a fine spirit of co-operation.—Tilburg News.

ALMOST PERSONAL

A letter from an interested reader of this paper gives a number of pertinent questions that could be asked in any live town. The last one is: "Who is the man who sleeps during the sermon and then complains of its quality?"

As there are only about ten of us men who go to church this one borders on the personal.—Bridgeburg Review.

— ON PARLIAMENT HILL —

By a Member of the Parliamentary Press Gallery

OTTAWA, May 16th, 1925.—An legislative progress made during this fourth session of the fourteenth Parliament—and real progress has been made—has been in spite of a variety of obstacles, most of which have been interposed by the Conservative obstructionists. Needless prolonged debates and many exhibitions of unwarranted acerbity of political feeling have characterized the past three months; and yet with all this the King Government keeps steadily going ahead and its majorities in the House continue to grow. Those who in the House are frequently guilty of most heroic in challenging the Prime Minister to dissolve Parliament and appeal to the people without delay are really bluffing. The last thing they want is an immediate election. A notable illustration of this situation is furnished in the result of the division of the House on Thursday night, called on short notice, the outcome of which was a majority for the Liberals of 77, and the placing of the Conservatives, as well as the Progressives, in a hopeless position.

DISINTEGRATION OF THE PROGRESSIVES
In the course of the main debate on the Budget the Progressives, following the introduction by Sir Henry Drayton of an amendment to the motion of Hon. James A. Robb to go into Committee of Ways and Means, submitted a sub-amendment which was ruled out of order by the Speaker, a repetition of an incident in a similar situation two years previous. On that occasion the Liberal majority was 37, with 18 Progressives supporting the Government. On Thursday afternoon of this week John Evans, Progressive (Saskatoon) moved an amendment to the motion for third reading of the Budget proposal which was previously moved as a sub-amendment. The majority for the Government was 11, an increase of 40 over the previous Budget division, but the situation as far as the Conservatives was concerned was reversed. On the previous Budget division 18 Progressives supported the Liberals, while in the latter case 14 voted with the Government. In the previous division the Conservatives voted with the Progressives, but in this latter case against them. Especially is the inconsistency of the Conservatives shown when it is known that Sir Henry Drayton, acting leader of the Opposition last Thursday night, challenged the Government to regard this as a vote of want of confidence, as the Prime Minister had previously suggested, and declared that the sooner the people of Canada had a chance to express their view of the present Government the better. But despite of Sir Henry's challenge a very small part of the Opposition was in the House when the vote was called, many of them deliberately absenting themselves from the vote.

GETTING BACK TO THE TWO-PARTY SYSTEM
As for the Progressives, their reason of excuse for precipitating this second Budget division is not clear, although some light may be thrown on it from the fact that only a few days ago and as a result of the main Budget division the Western group had a real "family row" which resulted in a change of Whips, C. M. Stewart (Humbolt) being substituted for J. E. Johnston. This was done, it was openly stated, to show that the party demanded discipline and would have it. The rank and file were incensed at 18 of their number supporting the Government on the main Budget vote and someone had to be punished. The punishment was inflicted on the Whip. But much significance is attached to the lack of results from that action. The independents in the party did not stay punished, and 14 of them persisted in being "bad boys" and voting as their common sense directed. The whole affair of the two Budget divisions has served to accentuate the fact that there is really little unity in Canada; for these political groups in the Federal arena.

GOVERNMENT'S POSITION STRENGTHENED

Just before the vote was called on last Thursday night the Prime Minister said some things to the House of the new Progressive move. "While it is perfectly true," he declared, "that the amendment when presented by the leader of the Progressive party at the time the Budget was introduced could not then be discussed, there is no single affirmation or sentence of that amendment which has not been fully discussed in the course of the long debate which took place on the Budget."
