Here and There

All tourists' records, motor and train, are being broken at Banff, Alberta, this year. More than 13,000 cars were registered by the first of August with the big rush yet to come. As many as 2,000 were under canvas at one time in the Government auto camp ground.

Maple sugar and maple syrup production in Canada during the season of 1925 amounted to 9,791,359 pounds and 1,672,093 gallons, respectively, with an aggregate value of $6,825,416. This compares with an output of 9,385,415 pounds of maple sugar and 1,970,696 gallons of maple syrup during 1924. Quebec province accounted for over 90 per cent. of the production of maple sugar and over half of the output of maple syrup.

Production of the four basic industries of British Columbia during 1924 aggregated in value $210,892,793, as compared with $207,934,041 in the previous year, according to a statement issued by the Provincial Government. The 1924 production was made up as follows, with 1923 comparative figures in brackets: Forest products, $80,702,000 ($86,674,400); agriculture, $60,029,224 ($59,139,798); mines, $48,704,604 ($41,304,320); and fisheries, $21,256,965 ($20,795,923).

Canada's ordinary revenue for the four months of the present fiscal year ended July 31 last, shows an increase of $2,982,163 over the same four-month period last year, according to a statement made by the Department of Finance. Ordinary revenue for the four months of 1925 amounted to $141,739,416. Ordinary expenditures during the four-month period show a decrease from $96,544,541 in 1924 to $95,655,692 this year.

George H. Ham, known throughout Canada as the Grand Old Man of the Canadian Pacific, celebrated his seventy-eighth birthday on Sunday, August 23rd, and was the recipient of a deluge of congratulatory messages from all parts of the country. Col. Ham has been with the Canadian Pacific since 1891 and by his social activities and powers as an orator has made for himself and for the company a veritable army of staunch and faithful friends.

Butter exported from Canada during the twelve months ending June, 1925, amounted to 25,000,120 pounds, valued at $9,584,794, a decided increase over the figures of the previous year when exports amounted to 12,000,979 pounds, valued at $5,081,684, according to a report issued by the Federal Department of Agriculture. Shipments were made to the United Kingdom, the United States, South America, South Africa, West Indies, Alaska, China, Japan, Germany, Belgium, Cuba, Holland, New Zealand and many other countries.

James Oliver Curwood, the well-known American novelist, who crossed not long ago to Europe on the "Empress of France" and returned a few weeks later to Canada on the "Empress of Scotland," wirelessly the following message from the "Scotland" to the Canadian Pacific headquarters in Montreal: "Can never fully express my appreciation of the splendid treatment accorded me by Captain Gillies and Captain Griffiths, and the staffs aboard the 'Empress of France' and the 'Empress of Scotland.'"

A party of British journalists is now touring Canada at the invitation of President E. W. Beatty, of the Canadian Pacific Railway, for the purpose of gaining first hand knowledge of economic and industrial conditions in this country. They are John A. Buist, Glasgow Herald; C. J. Jory, London Daily Telegraph; F. R. Peterson, London Times; H. Reed, South Wales Daily News, Cardiff; Captain E. Altham, London Morning Post; Hugh Martin, London Daily News; R. A. Colwill, Western Morning News, Plymouth; W. A. Roston, Daily Chronicle, London; J. F. Chapter, Westminster Gazette, London; John Rogers, Belfast Telegraph.

The Blighted Tree
By Saida East. Editor

"As this tree shall blossom, so shall your life be fair and happy and beautiful."

Alice Clyde blushed and looked happy just now. Why should not the clever fortune teller use the tree as a simile, for had not the shrewd gypsy woman seen Alice's lover, brave, handsome Wylie Davis, leave its shade with a kiss for Alice, and was it not under that same graceful cherry tree their mutual troth had been plighted?

And with the radiant future thus outlined, Alice devoted the week to tender attention for the lover who was going away for a few months to close up some business in war-ridden Mexico.

He had been left some Mexican mining interests by an uncle; inheritance had disturbed its regular operations and Wylie was anxious to dispose of it.

It was a solace and a pleasure to Alice to sit under the tree often after that. The blossoms came and the spot where fond memories clustered became a cherished oasis.

One morning Alice took the daily newspaper and proceeded to her favorite seclusion. Her mother, working about the house, ran out quickly as from the garden there rang out a shriek, shrill and echoing.

As she reached the open doorway she made out Alice, lying prostrate under the tree. A young man, passing along the street, leaped the fence and was at the side of the prostrate girl almost as soon as her anguished mother.

"Oh, Mr. Trumbull! help me get her into the house," breathed the distracted mother. Just then Alice's sister, Rosamond, joined the others. A newspaper was tightly clasped in Alice's hand. They lifted her and bore her to a couch in the sitting room.

"Will you hurry for a doctor, Mr. Trumbull, please?" spoke Rosamond. "This is something more than a faint." The young man departed on wings of fleetness. The anxiety in his grave, earnest face was as intense as that displayed by mother and sister. It might well be, for he had been an aspirant for the love of Alice before Wylie had supplanted him.

Like the true man that he was, although hurt to the soul, Trumbull had accepted the award of fate. Alice had continued to be kind to him.

Within the hour the cause of Alice's collapse was known. In the newspaper she had read an item telling of an attack of insurgents upon the mine owned by Wylie. Ten of the workmen had been massacred, a number of others carried away as prisoners and Wylie Davis was missing.

The shock prostrated Alice utterly. For two weeks she lay torpid, fevered, and came back to life weak and brooding. She spoke calmly but despairingly of Wylie. "He is dead," she said—my soul tells me I shall never see him again." Then one day she proffered a request that blanchard her mother's face and caused Rosamond to quiver with dismay.

"Mother," spoke Alice feebly, "it would be a comfort to me to sleep in the north room, where I can see the cherry tree where I stood with Wylie."

"My dear Allen," quavered the perturbed mother, "the doctor insists that the light, sun and air are just right for you here."

"I shall do if you don't do as I say," said Alice. "I want to die anyway, now that Wylie's gone."

For hours Alice moaned out her desire. The doctor told Mrs. Clyde that they must do something to answer her wish.

"But the tree was rooted up in the storm two weeks ago," sobbed the anguished mother, "and when Alice sees this she will regard it the final omen of fate."

When Dale Trumbull called to inquire about Alice that evening Rosamond told him of their new anxiety. Her grief appealed to him and aroused his deepest compassion.

"Something must be done," he spoke after a period of deep reflection, "yes, I think I know what, but Alice must never know."

For two nights, with the aid of others, Dale Trumbull delved and worked to remove from his own orchard a flourishing cherry tree, as near the prototype of the one that had been destroyed as could be found. When, two days later, Alice was removed to another room, her eyes rested seemingly upon the tree she so cherished. The sight of it seemed to quiet, to console her, and Dale was glad, and Rosamond looked up into his honest eyes with a gratitude that somehow seemed to give him a new interest in the sister of the woman he had loved and lost.

One day he arrived, flushed and breathless, at the Clyde garden gate, where Rosamond stood. He had news—great news! Wylie had escaped from his captors and he was coming home! A true man, a good man, if Dale was a trifle sad, he was also happy as he saw the old light of hope come back to the wan face of Alice.

And once more the reunited lovers stood under the cherry tree shade. And later, after they had married and come away, at the self-same spot Dale Trumbull, who had learned to cherish the sweet, kindly impulses of the loyal sister, asked Rosamond to become his wife.

VOCAL INSTRUCTOR COMING

Mr. George Rapley, vocal instructor of Hamilton, will commence teaching in Jarvis during the present month. Mr. Rapley is a vocal teacher on the staff of the Toronto and Hamilton Conservatories of Music and tenor soloist at Centenary church, Hamilton. Mr. Rapley is a native of London, England, and since coming to this country, two years ago, has been very successful as a vocalist and teacher of singing. Lessons will be given at the studio of Meta MacMurchy and particulars may be obtained by telephoning Jarvis 78.

JARVIS FALL FAIR
OCTOBER SIX & SEVEN

SEPTEMBER ROD AND GUN

In "Rod and Gun in Canada" for September, a new series of British Columbia sporting articles from the pen of A. Bryan Williams commences. This series is entitled "Breezes from the West, and the first part in the new issue promises a number of hunting and outdoor yarns of the first water. A nature story of a more unusual nature for the magazine, Shuffelpaw's First Fishing by H. R. Evans is a most graphic account of a young bear's first lone season.

In addition to the regular staff articles covering all phases of hunting and outdoor life, September "Rod and Gun" contains a large number of very good stories adapted to the late summer.

"Rod and Gun in Canada" is published monthly by W. J. Taylor Limited, Woodstock, Ont.

Miss Blanche McMahon of Tyrell, a recent graduate of the Robinson Business College, Waterford, has accepted a secretarial position with the Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines Ltd., Timmins, at $90 a month, making four R. B. C. graduates to go to Northern Ontario at salaries of from $90 to $125 a month. Miss Grace Coggins is now employed as stenographer for Mr. Robinson.
