THE WAR GREAT

A little more than eight years ago the fates of many nations rested in the hands of military leaders, and to their judgment, rather than to the judgment of statesmen, millions of lives were entrusted. The World war, almost over night, brought fame to many military men, but eight years of peace have brought forgetfulness of war and warriors. Most of the famous soldiers of the last war have passed completely out of the limelight and few remain in active service.

Among the great captains who died during or since the war are Lord Kitchener, Lord Roberts, Field Marshal French, Sir Stanley Maule, General Townshend, of the British Army; Hotzendorf, of the Austrian Army; Enver Pasha, brilliant leader of the Turks against the Russians; General Brussloff, Russia's famous cavalry leader; General von Hausen, leader of the Saxons at the Marne; Gellieni, improviser of France's "taxicab army," and General Mangin, commander of the French colonials.

And of the living how many are still in the public eye? The three French marshals, Foch, Joffre and Pétain, are still in active service if the daily routine at their desks in the war ministry can be called active, but the world hears little of them. Of the American "big four"—Pershing, Liggett, Bullard and Harbord—not even General Pershing is greatly in evidence, although he has had several important civil commissions from President Coolidge.

Turning to the German military leaders who survived the war one finds them in retirement, with the exception of Marshal Hindenburg who has been saved from seclusion by his election to the presidency of the German Republic. Even the famous British Generals, Haig, Robertson, Allenby and Byng are almost forgotten, as are the Italian leaders Diaz and Cadorna and the Belgian commander, Baron Jacques.

Surely the hour of military fame is brief.

in the community and offering large rewards to those who murder it.

That the United States is at the beginning of a new era in banking is unquestioned. Evidence of this revolutionary change are the banking mergers involving billions of dollars, the trend toward branch banking and universal use by the public of banking facilities whether in the largest city or the smallest village.

PAPER

When one reads his newspaper he may ponder on the tremendous amount of paper consumed daily by the thousands of newspapers published on this globe, but the chances are he supposes relatively little paper is consumed for other purposes. The fact is that the uses for paper are so numerous that the layman can no longer tell what is and what is not paper.

All are familiar with paper for reading matter and paper for writing material; with paper for wrapping; with wall paper, paper partitions and paper novelties, toys and ornaments; with paper profits and fortunes on paper. Many of the most important uses of paper are unknown as such to the average man. There are paper wheels for railroad cars, for instance. Fire buckets are often paper beneath their bright coats of red paints. Recently paper barrels have appeared on the market. The latter are made of coiled paper rope and are lighter, stronger and cheaper than their wooden prototypes.

Legion are the domestic uses of paper products. Shelves are covered with paper, paper is used to start the fire and line the garbage can. Paper under the rug and table cloth protect the rug and the polished table-top. The window washer is learning from the jeweler and optician that paper has no peer as a glass polisher and cleaner.

As all but the finer grades of paper are made from wood pulp it is not surprising that the paper-consuming public, and that includes everybody in the civilized world, is concerned over the future sources of timber supply for the paper mills.

Charity also covers a multitude of skin games.

Joy riders need not be in such a hurry. Hell keeps open all night.

The secret of leadership is merely the knack of finding followers.

School Teacher Takes on Big Job

Alice is only twenty-one. Yet she already has a profession and a career and left both behind her. From now on her principal business is to fight for the life of a child. And when the child does become a little less precarious work, but it must not be teaching. At least that's what the doctors say. For the hard work she went through in a few months she placed her hands on a cot in the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives.

Alice was heavily when she told she is only a youngster, and says she immediately big job is to respond to the wonderfully sympathetic treatment she is receiving from the nurses and doctors who are trying to undo in a few months the harm that disease has wrought in several years.

A gift from you will assist the Hospital in bringing Alice and other similar cases back to health.

THE BIGGEST BUSINESS

Despite popular belief to the contrary, banking is the biggest business in this country. Usually one thinks of great enterprise in terms of oil, steel, or perhaps copper, and when one dwells on big business it is with visions of vast buildings, smoke-belching stacks, or fire-breathing furnaces or forests of oil derricks. Yet the banking capital employed in the United States alone is more than six times as large as the capital represented by the principal steel corporations.

Within the last decade banking has forged to the forefront among the great commercial forces of the world. No longer content with being places of deposit and discount, the banks of this country have marched shoulder to shoulder with its industrial development.

No longer is the bank presidency a part-time occupation requiring the attention of the town's successful merchant for a brief part of the day only. Today banking is a specialized profession, calling upon the best brains

Little Girls' Game Causes Heartache To Lonely Mother

Two little girls sit at a window playing a game. They make believe that every woman they see coming up the street is mamma coming home to them. They shut their eyes until she gets almost to the door and then open them hoping it is really the one they long to see. They firmly believe that some day their wonderful dreams will come true. Mother knows of this game, and she is doing her best to make it come out right; but just at present she is having no small struggle to stay on this earth at all.

She is taking the cure at the Muskoka Hospital, but had allowed herself to become so greatly run down that there isn't much left of her for the kindly nurses and doctors to build upon. The wonderful quiet of the great hospital, and the care she is getting, are soothing to her worried mind and body, but they also have to be with her little daughters again.

French-Canadian Chanson Has New Lease of Life

1. Charles Marchand, well known French-Canadian folk song singer in typical pose.
2. Chansons have kept the spirits of log-jam breakers high at many a difficult task.
3. Singing and paddling went well together.

created by the lumbermen and habitants; for music is a living art in French Canada.

Only within recent years have we begun to realize how rich is the treasury of lovely melodies associated with the folk songs of Canada. Thanks to men like Charles Marchand, interpreter of the French-Canadian "chanson", these folk songs have taken on new life, and before long they will be available for the English speaking population of Canada, owing to the efforts of John Murray Gibbon, whose translations will be published in book form early in the year.

With the idea of popularizing the English versions and thereby bringing about a closer understanding between the French and English elements of Canada, Mr. Marchand is at present making transccontinental concert tours under the auspices of the National Council of Education.

DECEMBER "ROD AND GUN"

With the arrival of the hunting season comes the December issue of "Rod and Gun" with a stock of reading matter appropriate to the season. "The Old Gray Duck" by Theo. J. Stocks which appears in this issue, while not a story of big game, is one that will appeal to men with the hunt in their thoughts. Hesperian Dale also hunts deer in Nova Scotia, but with a camera. Henry A. Braithwaite, a well known eastern guide tells of his experience with Moose while Martin Hunter tells a typical story in "The Wolf Cub of the Labrador." James Fraser has a timely full page cartoon in the December number.

A good yarn of a day's adventure on a B. C. river trip is told under the title of "A Chapter of Accidents." In Outdoor Talk, W. C. Motley has another interesting woodcraft article, while the Guns and Ammunition Department edited by C. S. Landis has some good dope for the man interested in guns as Fishing Notes has also for the angler and Kennel Notes for the dog fancier.

"Rod and Gun" is published monthly by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woodstock, Ont.
