HAVE INCREASED WEIGHT OF POST PARCELS

Twenty-Five Cts. Pounds to Coast—Effective Immediately

To accommodate the public in the matter of parcels post rates on small packages the post office department at Ottawa has increased the maximum weight on parcels to be accepted at the rate of one cent an ounce. The former maximum was eight ounces. It is now 14. The distance limit does not apply, save that the addressee must be located in Canada. The new rate is effective immediately.

While the increased maximum on the surface would appear to afford a reduction in postage charges, and, in fact, actually does in the case of parcels sent long distances, that change is not altogether without its joker. The existing rate for parcels weighing from 15 ounces to three pounds sent to points within a radius of 20 miles is 10 cents, and the alteration in the rates on small parcels will mean that packages weighing 14 ounces will require 14 cents, an increase of four cents, though a lesser weight.

On parcels sent to points as far distant as British Columbia, the pinch will be felt in the cases of parcels weighing between 14 ounces and one pound. The pound rate is 25 cents, and though parcels weighing up to 14 ounces may be sent that distance at one cent per ounce, or two additional ounces, or fractions thereof, will cost an extra 11 cents.

Parcel post rates underwent a general revision last fall, when various weights were grouped under flat rates. By virtue of the new rating and the grouping of large parcels sent long distances could be sent for less than formerly was the case and small parcels for more. This meant that the rates had been lowered or increased according to the weight of the parcel and the distance to be forwarded in somewhat of an inverse ratio.

Changed Methods in Handling Milk

How much do the farmers and dairymen of the United States pay in toll to bacteria in milk? In process of arriving at the answer to this question, representatives of leading milk and dairy products companies of New York recently met with officials of the State Agricultural Experiment Station, with the Department of Farms and Markets and the College of Agriculture at the Experiment Station, Geneva.

The bacterial count is being used more and more as a basis for determining how much per pound a farmer is to be paid for his milk. Getting the bacterial count under a given figure means millions of dollars annually to Uncle Sam's dairymen. Dairymen, themselves, are alive to this question, and where the milk produced is a material part of the income from the farm, complete sanitary precautions are being taken to insure a low bacterial count in the milk.

Precautions start at the beginning of milk production and continue clear through until the time the milk is in the hands of the consumer. To begin with, properly ventilated, easily cleaned stables are provided; plenty of bedding is given the cows; platforms are built the right length to accommodate the particular breed of cows that are kept; the gutter is built wide and deep; the animal is clipped about the udder and flanks periodically.

The cows are groomed carefully every day and just before milking, loose particles of dirt are brushed off, or when the cow is clipped, wiped off with a damp cloth. Small top milk pails are used to receive milk from the cows. Utensils such as milk pails, milk cans, milking machines and separators, are thoroughly sterilized after each milking.

The fresh-drawn milk is immediately removed to the cooling tank where it is cooled to a temperature of 50 degrees to 60 degrees Fahrenheit.

On receipt at the dairy, the creamery or the condenser, the same extreme sanitary precautions prevail. White garbed workers who have passed medical inspection, who observe rules of personal cleanliness as well as hygiene in the handling of milk and milk products, go about their duties efficiently and intelligently. Immediately after the pasteurizing of whole milk, it is bottled and capped. The date of bottling is stamped on the cap and the milk is usually sold before 36 hours have elapsed since pasteurizing.

What a difference over the old-time methods of handling milk! It is these changed methods in the handling of the nation's milk supply that have enabled the individual consumption of milk to more than 54 gallons per year.

Is Killed, But Saves Violin
Author of Prisoner's Song Dies Penniless.
Disastrous Fires

Rather than have his violin broken, 15-year-old Kenneth Gould, of Stirling, received injuries that resulted in his death. The boy had grabbed a ride on a horse sleigh. The animal bolted. Rather than jump to safety, with the chance of breaking his violin, the youngster clung on. The horse, galloping madly, crashed through a plate glass window, and Gould was hurled off the sleigh. His head was cut and his right ear almost severed. He was given medical attention, but complications set in, his left side becoming paralyzed, and shortly afterward he passed away.

Asleep in each others arms, with their hands tucked under their heads, Joe Kushener and Willie Lebachuk, 12 years of age, were found just in time to save them from death on the open expanse of Thunder Bay ice, a mile and a half from the shore at Port Arthur last week. They had been skating, and after going quite a distance, became exhausted, and could not reach land. The boy's hands escaped freezing by being under their heads, although a few hours longer would certainly have meant death.

Last week fire started on Main St., Arthur, Ont., completely destroying the G. S. Cumming furniture and G. A. Shaver jewelry stores and stock. The loss is estimated at $50,000. The excitement was too much for George Stortz, who collapsed on the street. He was carried into a house nearby but was dead when he got there. A severe fire which was raging at the time, hampered the firemen's efforts considerably.

Declaring that he can prove without any trouble that Victoria Hospital is diverting paying patients into the public ward to provide cases for medical students and thereby causing a loss in revenue to the city, Dr. James D. Wilson, of London, offered to give $100 to any charity named if his charge can be proved untrue.

Announcement was made by Messrs. Green, McKay & Co., Toronto, that they have completed the purchase of the capital stock, assets, subscription lists and goodwill of the London Advertiser Co., and had resold the same to parties who are now in control. The paper will continue liberal, with J. F. McKay, as president.

W. H. Brown, of Trafalgar Twp., experienced an exciting few moments when in few minutes after starting a fire in the kitchen range the stove exploded, owing to frost in the water pipe, which was connected to a water front in the stove. The range was a complete wreck, but Brown fortunately escaped unhurt. (Continued on Last Page)
