ented by a system calling for the best use of hygienic and preventative medicine. The first consideration is an absolutely clean maternity stail for the mare, and proper attention to all details of disinfection for both the mother and foal. Hundreds of foals are lost by permitting them to lie ind a manure pile or dirty barn rard. Get them out on clean green grass away from the infecting teria of the stable and barnyard. The mavel requires attention, which can best be given by putting a 1/1006 bi-chloride solution in a shallow cup and holding it against the stump of cord. Dirty hands have infected hundreds so do not touch the navel with your fingers. After immersing the sord in the bi-chloride solution for 2 dnutes, paint it with isdine or dust with astringent powder. The astringent powder may be repeated every half hour until the cord is dry.

Protective inoculation of the foal has been practiced with more or less ss, but this should be adminis-
