OCTOBER DAYS
 "Melancholy days," as applied to the days of fall, is a misnomer. Fall days are actually days of promise. They bring with them nothing of real cause for melancholy. They usher in for growing things the period of rest which is essential to the replenishment of their glory for another season. Things out of doors do not die in fall. It is only their leaves, their blooms or their fruits that wither, and this is all a part of the process which insures renewed abundance for the coming year. When one holds to this thought the idea of "melancholy days" in fall passes away.

Aside from all this an Jarvis fall day such as Monday leaves little to be desired from any reasonable standpoint. Sunshine all day, a gentle warmth as of Maytime, a light breeze to freshen the air, and an absence of smoke or haze, thus bringing the surrounding hills with their scarlet and yellow and green into plain view—all these we had. The answer to the old question, "What is so rare as a day in June?" is, plainly, "A day of equal loveliness in October." Monday was one of that kind. Anybody who thought himself too busy to realize it and give it consideration and enjoy it missed one of life's grand possibilities.

Soon now there will be frost. But meanwhile we had Monday and we will have other days like it. And a poet has said:
 Jack Frost's a knight in armor of spear and crystal jade;
 Of smothered and ruby are his cold trappings made;
 And where he rides in triumph, in sleep the forests lie.
 There is no death in autumn—and we shall never die.

EATING APPLES IN PUBLIC
 We can see no good reason why there should not be a renaissance of apple-eating in public, frankly and without embarrassment. The apple is a fruit well adapted to the requirements of the pedestrian, and may be consumed on any crowded street without inconvenience to the consumer or peril to his fellow creatures. This is obviously not true of the orange, and, alas, it most emphatically is not true of the banana. The apple is innocuous. It harbors no ill-will toward mankind, and is, in its every aspect, the most friendly of fruits.
 For the life of us we cannot see any indecency in yielding to an apple in public—that is to say, on the streets. The eating thereof could not possibly offend the most captious, and would result in the stimulation of a great industry if it became the common practice. We can well imagine that many citizens who mix their morning ozone with cigar and cigarette smoke, would feel altogether more capable and energetic if they munch an apple as they proceeded to the office.

THE WORLD'S SERIES
 Another "world's series" is with us. Once more the national game is staging its seasonal exit in a spectacular climax—a climax that has been a building since the year's opening game. Again the champions of the major leagues have met to settle their claims to supremacy. The two contesting teams are not of one city, and that adds to the series national interest. The contenders represent the season's best in the game and all lovers of baseball will follow their final struggle with keen interest. The series has only commenced. The contesting teams have just begun to fight. But they have shown that they are putting all they have into the game. Such sport, illustrating the lightning-like traits of American nature, is worthy of its great popularity.
 The two letters that express the most tragedy are ex.
 The best example of a vote of confidence is to eat the hash.
 Many a man would have a better appreciation of his home were a real estate salesman to write an advertisement offering it for sale.
