Iona Sacred Isle of the Hebrides.

No one spending a week or more in Scotland should leave without making an effort to go to the island of Iona, the sacred isle of the Hebrides off the west coast.

This is the birthplace of Scotland's nationality, culture and religion, and the Church of St. Columba might be called the Westminster Abbey of the land, for it contains royalties of Scotland, Ireland, Norway and France.

The isle is only three and a half miles long by about half a mile broad.

If you want to make your rooms look larger, as well as more restful to the eye, use a large rug instead of the scatter size, and plan for a border of painted wood or parquet. Carrying the carpet to the base boards of a room dwarfs its apparent size.

SMILES

One of the Better Sort.

Beryl was getting into bed when mother came to wish her good-night. "And did you ask God to forgive you?" she asked, having in mind the little temper which Beryl had shown during the evening.

"Oh, yes, mamma," came the reply, "and God said it was all right. He had many little girls worse than I."

Relatively Unchanged.

Wife—"There has been quite a diminishing of women's clothes."

Husband—"Maybe so, but there doesn't seem to be any more hooks for me in the closet."

Proven.

"You cannot get eggs without hens," asserted the speaker, stressing his point.

"My dad can! He keeps ducks," yelled a boyish voice from the rear.

The Good Gentleman.

This is a world of sorrow, Likewise a world of sin, But just about to-morrow I'll certainly begin

To renovate this mundane sphere So folks like me can stand it here.

I think there should be hung in every office where salesmen congregate a sign, etched in letters high and wide, reading: "You made a sale—did you make a customer?"

Some men think it smart to be able to write such a poor hand that nobody can read it, but it isn't.

The prepared for good time never comes.

A barking dog never bites, for how can a dog bark when he is biting?

You never realize how many kinds of giggles there are until you ride on a Pullman with a flock of college girls.

A case showing extreme dissipation—a potato with dark rings under its eyes.

Surnames and Their Origin

GUTHRIE

Variation—MacGuthrie.

Racial Origin—Irish.

Source—A given name.

Here is a family name which, when it does not come from Teutonic sources (and it does not when it has now or formerly the prefix "Mac") is traceable to an old Irish given name not unlike the Teutonic Godfrey. It is "Goethfrith," a truly Irish name, though you might think it old German or Danish. Its meaning, however, was quite different, being compounded of the ancient Irish words for "straight" and "small."

The MacGuthrie or "MacGoethfrith" clan was founded by a chieftain of this name who was killed in the year 1161.

This clan was a division of the O'Reillys, which clan in its turn was a branch of the O'Rourke's originally, though later it achieved great prominence as an independent entity.

COSTIGAN

Racial Origin—Irish.

Source—A given name.

Here is an Irish family name which possesses a peculiar development in one respect.

Like virtually all Irish family names, it had its origin in a clan name.

The true Gaelic designation of this organization was "Clann Oostagáin."

But, unlike other family names, a remnant of this word "Clann" has been left in the process of changing the name into English form, which accounts for its being Costigan instead of some such form as "Oostigan" or "Oostagan."

The Clann Oostagáin took its name from the given name of its founder, a chieftain named "Oostagan," who lived, as nearly as can be estimated, in the middle of the fourteenth century.

This clan was an offshoot of the MacGillpatrick's, who came later to be known as the Fitzpatrick's of Oesary, and this clan in turn came more or less from the Faly O'Connors.

A Tragic Fire.

The most distressing animal tragedy that has occurred in Toronto in a long time was the destruction of more than twenty of the trained horses of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, when fire broke out in the regimental stables at Stanley Barracks on the night of February 7th.

The fire was discovered shortly before 11 o'clock, and the men in barracks rushed to the stables and plunged into the blazing, smoke-clouded building and rescued as many horses as could be reached.

Thirty-four terror-stricken animals rushed in panic to the streets, and tore madly in every direction. They were all brought in by morning. Eight were trapped in the burning stables and died in the flames, among them "Billy," the Shetland pony mascot, the pet of the regiment. Others were blinded and so badly burned that they were destroyed at once, and a few developed pneumonia and were destroyed.

The training of the horses represented years of work, and added to their value, and it is distressing to reflect that, had they been confined in fire-proof stables where the flames could have been quickly controlled, the results would not have been so tragic. The stables were old and built of wood, and the flames devoured them like tinder.

A tribute was paid to the heroism of the troopers by Major Baty, who said that "the boys worked like Trojans. They plunged into the smoke and fire to save the horses, and nothing could stop them. It would be unfair to mention one to the exclusion of others. Every man of them deserves the Royal Humane Society's medal."

These Composers Didn't Waste Much Time.

"Abide With Me," the music of which, Dame Clara Butt states, Mr. Samuel Liddle wrote for her in two days, is not the only famous song composed in double-quick time. Boucicault took the words of "Killarney" one morning to Balfe, who merely glanced through them, then sat down at the piano and excitedly played the melody which all the world was soon singing. Tito Mattei had a similar inspiration in regard to "Dear Heart," striking out the air on the piano immediately after reading the words, while the music of "The Holy City" came in a flood of inspiration to Michael Maybrick (Stephen Adams) on the receipt of Mr. Weatherley's poem. Trotter, too, used to tell how he was walking home from the Aquarium one evening, when the idea of "In Old Madrid" came to him. Not having paper handy, he rushed into a shop, seized a paper bag, and in two minutes scribbled down the whole melody.

THIS SPRING TIME IS TONIC TIME

Something is Needed to Quickly Improve Your Health.

With the passing of winter many people feel weak, depressed and easily tired. There is no particular disease, but the system lacks tone. You find yourself tired, low-spirited, often unable to get sound sleep at night. All this is the result of closer-in-door confinement of the winter months, and shows that the blood has become thin and watery. New, rich, red blood is what you need to put you right and there is no other tonic medicine can give you this new, rich blood as surely and as speedily as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. This new blood goes to every part of the body and quickly improves the general health. The digestion is toned up, and you have better appetite, the nerves are strengthened and sleep is refreshing. The special value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at this season is shown by the statement of Mrs. Elizabeth Clarke, R.R. No. 1, Hastings, Ont., who says: "I know Dr. Williams' Pink Pills
