

SANDWICH FILLINGS FOR PICNIC TREATS

Cheese Sardines

Spread crackers with bits of cheese and bake until the cheese melts. At lunch time, drain the oil from a can of sardines, and pour over the fish the juice from 1/2 of a lemon. Each diner makes his own sandwich by placing a sardine between 2 cheese crackers.

Radish Sandwiches

Put radishes through the food chopper, using the coarse knife, and mix with enough salad dressing to form a stiff paste. This is especially good for use with rye bread.

Sardine Sandwiches

Three parts of chopped hard-boiled eggs to 1 part of minced sardines, is delicious with brown bread.

Cream Cheese Sandwiches

Into cream cheese mix minced pinonias to suit the taste. Use with brown bread.

Mix finely chopped English walnuts with cream cheese and season with salad dressing.

Into a ball of cream cheese work a small onion chopped fine and 1 tablespoonful of minced green pepper.

To a cream cheese add 1/2 of a cupful of chopped English walnut-meats, 1 green pepper—from which the inside has been removed—minced fine, 1 teaspoonful of Worcester sauce and a few drops of lemon juice. Spread between buttered slices of bread or between thin unsweetened water crackers.

English Luncheon Sandwich

Butter lightly slices of whole-wheat or white bread and sprinkle with cayenne pepper. Lay between the pairs a slice of boiled ham glazed with orange marmalade. This is unusual, pleasant and delicious.

Honey Sandwiches

Mix honey with lemon juice to suit the taste, then add chopped nutmeats to make the paste quite stiff. This is good on brown or whole-wheat bread.

Rolls and Celery Sandwiches

Cut thin slices from fresh bread, remove the crusts and butter each slice. Lay a lettuce leaf across one corner of the bread and roll the slice toward the opposite corner. Sprinkle lightly with salt and roll in oiled paper. The groove in a tender stalk of celery may be filled with cheese and the sandwich rolled as just described.

Pimento Cheese Filling

Put through the food chopper 3 times; 1 pound of yellow cheese, 1 can of pimentos from which the juice has been drained, and 1 teaspoonful of salt. Mix to spreading consistency and use as a filling for sandwiches with any kind of bread.

Ham and Chicken Filling

Put through the food chopper enough cold boiled ham and cold cooked chicken to make 1 cupful of each, then enough chives to make 1/2 of a cupful, a few sprigs of parsley and 1 small green pepper. Add enough boiled salad dressing to make the mixture of good spreading consistency. Use with crisp lettuce leaves between thin slices of buttered rye or brown bread.

Anchovy Rolls

Boil 4 eggs for 15 minutes, then mash them fine with 2 teaspoonfuls of butter, 1 teaspoonful of finely chopped parsley and enough anchovy paste to give the mixture a good pink color. Lay each slice of fresh bread on a moist cloth, spread with soft butter, then with the paste. Roll the slice from one corner to the opposite corner, then roll the sandwich in oiled paper and twist the ends.

Deviled Almond Sandwich

Butter slices of bread and cover them with bits of cheese; bake in a hot oven until the cheese is melted. Have ready 1 cupful of blanched and shredded almonds seasoned to taste with salt, and to this add 3 tablespoonfuls of minced olives or green peas, 1 tablespoonful of chili sauce and 1 teaspoonful each of French mustard and Worcestershire sauce. Mix well together and spread on the hot cheese. Put the sandwiches together quickly and wrap in oiled paper to enable the moisture to counteract the drying in the oven.

Piquant Beef Roll

Spread a very thin slice of fresh bread with soft butter, then sprinkle with 1 teaspoonful of finely chopped mustard pickle with which has been mixed a slice of onion finely minced. Lay on this a wafer-thin slice of cold roast beef and roll the sandwich from one corner to the other. If these are to be served immediately, they may be held together with a toothpick. If for a picnic, roll them in oiled paper.

Piccadilly Filling

Chop fine: enough cold cooked chicken to make 1 cupful, cooked chicken livers to make 1/2 cupful, cold boiled ham to make 1/4 of a cupful, celery to make 2/3 of a cupful, 8 stuffed olives and a thin slice of green pepper. Mix all together with sufficient mayonnaise to produce a good spreading consistency.

Celery and Ham Roll

Through the food chopper put enough cold boiled ham to make 1/2 of a cupful, 1 hard-boiled egg, 1 canned sweet pimento and celery to make 1/4 of a cupful. Mix well together and spread on buttered slices of fresh bread. Roll from one corner to the opposite corner and wrap in oiled paper.

KITCHEN TIPS

Creaming sugar and butter will be a much easier task if the bowl in which they are creamed is placed in a larger bowl containing hot water. The creaming will thus be expedited greatly.

Linen will improve its looks and gloss if soapy water is used in making starch. The irons will not stick upon linen washed in this fashion.

Try granulated sugar in rinsing water in washing laces instead of starch. The result will prove highly satisfactory.

In ironing remember to iron with the thread of the goods and iron until the garment is dry, otherwise it will pucker.

A satisfactory proportion for making jelly is three-fourths of a cup of sugar to one cup of fruit juice.

IV. DAVID'S LAMENT OVER SAUL AND JONATHAN, 2 Sam. 1:17-27.

INTRODUCTION.—Nothing in Bible story is more impressive and beautiful than the story of the friendship of David and Jonathan, and it may safely be said that there is nothing finer in all literature, and nothing more true to the best that is in human nature. The character of Jonathan especially stands out in strong relief. Brave, generous, absolutely selfless, loyal both to his father and to his friend, unwilling to believe evil of either one, he is the "very gentle perfect knight" of Hebrew story, without fear and without reproach.

I. FIRST MEETING OF DAVID AND JONATHAN, 18:1-4.
It was when David returned to Saul bearing the grim trophies of his victory over Goliath that Jonathan saw him and loved him. This is their first recorded meeting. Whether or not they had met before we do not know. Jonathan as an officer in Saul's army bearing an important command may have been very little with his father, and David as a humble musician in his father's court, or even as an armor-bearer, may not have hitherto attracted his notice.

Jonathan's friendship, once given, was whole-hearted. He clothed David in his own garments, outer robe, military dress, and girdle, and gave him his own sword and bow. They made a covenant of friendship which remained unbroken even when Jonathan discovered that David was to succeed his father upon the throne. David's shepherd days in Bethlehem were at an end, and he became a member of the king's household and a captain in the king's army (18:5).

II. JONATHAN AS TRUE FRIEND AND REDEEMER, 19:1-7.
The intervening paragraphs tell of David's rapid advance in popularity with the people, in success in war, and in rank in Saul's court, and of the king's growing jealousy. Saul's fits of insanity returned with greater violence, and in his frenzy of jealous madness he sought to murder David, who was now his son-in-law, 18:20, 27, 28. Saul even went so far as to kill David's horse and servants to prevent his escape.

Here is where Jonathan's friendship proved itself. First, having warned David to hide himself, he went to his father and intimated with him. He boldly defended his friend and maintained his innocence of any wrong toward the king, recalling especially his victory over Goliath and the Philistine army. In his tender moments Saul was able to put aside his jealousy and his earlier affection for David revived. Now he declared that Jonathan should not be slain, and Jonathan had the joy of seeing his father and his friend reunited.

III. THE COVENANT OF FRIENDSHIP, 20:1-42 and 23: 15-18.
Saul's jealousy soon returned with the fame of David's further success in war against the Philistines, and again he tried to kill him. Compelled to flee for his life, David took refuge for a while with his old friend, Samuel, in Ramah. Together they returned to a college or settlement of the prophets among whom Samuel had a leading place. Pursued thither by Saul, David fled again, this time to his friend, Jonathan, indignantly asking, "What have I done? What is before thy father, and what is my sin in life?" Again Jonathan would have played the part of peacemaker if he could. He tried to defend his father and to make light of the danger. Finally, he agreed to find out from his father on the occasion of the new moon festival just what his disposition toward David was and to let him know. Outside the city in the quiet of the countryside the two friends renewed their covenant and David remained in hiding until Jonathan should bring him news from the king. Jonathan, after being in peril of his own life, brought back news of Saul's continued and deadly enmity, and they parted to meet only once again long afterward in the wild country south-east of Hebron, where David was still a fugitive and an outlaw (23:14-18).

FARM NOTES

The Canning Season
The canning of fruit and vegetables need no longer be done by what may be called as "the rule of thumb." The preservation of these foods is now so well understood that no risk need be taken with respect to loss by fermentation. The Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, through the Division of Horticulture, Experimental Farm, has carried out many experiments in this work, and has issued in Bulletin No. 77, N.S., a most excellent treatise for the guidance of those who would preserve their winter supply of garden products. Four principal methods of canning are dealt with known as the Cold Pack Method, Fractional or Intermittent Sterilization, Open Kettle and Steam Pressure. These are all fully explained in a Bulletin which is available at the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Directions are given for canning, and preserving in other ways, apples and other tree fruits, gooseberries and other bush fruit, as well as strawberries and such imported fruits as pineapples. Recipes are also given for the canning of such crops as asparagus, spinach, beans, peas, etc. Jelly making is also explained fully, as well as the making of pickles and relishes of various kinds. Particular stress is laid on proper storage which should be cool, dark and dry. It is shown by the Bulletin that different varieties of various crops require more sugar than others. Correct amounts for each of the very many varieties are shown.

Whole or Crushed Oats for Horses.
To try to find out whether it is worth while to crush oats that are fed to horses the Experimental Farms carried out a test from the 10th of June to the 5th of December.

The test was confined to four two horse teams. One horse in each team was fed a grain ration consisting of whole oats, while its mate received crushed oats. These grain rations were alternated for two weeks, one horse receiving whole oats every other period and crushed oats in the intervening period, while the other team was fed just the reverse way.

The results of these tests are reported in the 1926 Annual Report of the Animal Husbandry Division where it is shown that there is every little, if anything, to be gained by crushing the oats for working horses. In the 168 days when the test was going on the horses fed on whole oats showed gains in 6 periods totalling in all 255 pounds, while in 7 periods losses in weight were shown totalling 210 pounds, which shows a net gain of 45 pounds for the whole period. When crushed oats were being fed gains were recorded in 6 periods totalling 330 pounds, while during the other 6 periods the losses were shown totalling 305 pounds, showing a net gain for the full period of 25 pounds as against 45 pounds when whole oats were fed.

An exhaustive table showing the results of this test is interesting particularly in the consistency of the results obtained with the two feeds in the same period. Any gains or losses made were therefore attributed more to the work to which the horses were subject rather than whether the oats given were crushed or fed whole.

Imperial Fruit Show.
The Dominion Fruit Commissioner, G. E. McIntosh, has been notified that the next Imperial Fruit Show will be held at Manchester, England, from October 28 to November 5. Mr. McIntosh points out that the shows held in Manchester are always particularly successful and draw several times the attendance that patronize the shows when held in London.

This year's Fruit Show promises to be the most successful on record and holds unprecedented advertising possibilities. The area covered is one of the most populous in England and furnishes one of the best markets for Canadian fruit. The retail and wholesale trade of the Manchester district are cut to make the show a success, and among other attractions there is a grant of $10,000 to be spent in giving every visitor a free sample of Empire apples. It is therefore particularly important that the display of Canadian apples in the Overseas Section of the show should be as large and comprehensive as possible. Full particulars of the rules and regulations of the Imperial Fruit Show, and of the prizes offered, may be obtained from the Fruit Branch at Ottawa.
