MEMORIES

Memorial Day each year finds a grateful people ever more eager to pay homage to the dead and the living in whose memory and honor the holiday is set apart. Each year reduces still more the remnant of a great army that defended unto death a great moral principle. And the shrinking line touches the heart deeply.

Wars following that of the Rebellion have seen to it that for many years to come there will be Memorial Days in North America. The ranks of both countries were blended during the great World War, assuring a continuance in its present form of Memorial Day observances. But even should it be that no future wars should furnish martyrs, the gratitude of the people to their soldier dead will make perpetual an annual day in which to pay them tribute.

Inspiring as is the procession, eloquent as may be the orator, touching as may be the flowering of veterans' graves, these seem wholly inadequate as honors to the departed and the living. These men fought and died in battle and prison camp not that their sacrifices might be an annual occasion of spectacle and ceremony. Theirs was a nobler mission, a finer purpose. They fought for a principle, for an ideal, which they had a right to expect their heirs would hold safe and secure.

Gratitude and appreciation are not always best expressed by lips and gestures. What we owe these warriors is more than the suspension of business one day a year, more than applause and cheers when their flag is carried by, more than pensions and bonus, more than spoken or written eulogy. A greater part of that debt is in firm and fixed resolution to carry forward and upward the ideals for which these men bled and sweat, to make secure the victory they won, to translate into results the noble purposes that stirred their souls.

THE NEW HOME

Comes Cupid's month, the month of full-blown roses and of marriage. As the good ship "June Weddings" sets out for the marital voyage, little Dan Cupid stands on the quay which the vessel has just left and calls through his friendly trumpet to the coupled passengers: "Look out for pirates!"

Plainly visible ahead is a low, rakish craft, its piratical hull menacingly marked "Discord."

We wish not to cast the blight of pessimism upon the hopeful June voyagers. Yet we must say that never was deeply happy and nobly successful marriage so difficult as in these democratic days; because never was human individuality, female and male, so generally awake and conscious and self-insistent.

Which is as it should be. For democracy means the organization of society on the basis of respect for the individual.

Democratic Marriage, too, must be based upon self-respect and mutual respect. It is this demand which instinctively we feel and make, but which it is not easy to grant to another, that constitutes the essential difficulty of marriage in our days. The old type of home, in which are your throat and tonsils sore and nothing helps, use Mrs. Sybilla Spahr's Tonsilits and get good results or money back. Schreiber's Drug Store.

woman was the more or less subordinated and even suppressed, however glorified, housekeeper—that type is vanishing.

Obviously it is more difficult to maintain in harmonious relationship two distinct individualities in marriage than it used to be while husband and wife were "one." And the husband—or the wife—the one.

However, it is just such harmonization, in the democratic spirit of fair play, which must go toward the making of the new Home.

And Love remains the great harmonizer who routs the rakish craft "Discord" with the unconquerable wisdom of Concord.

JUNE GRADUATES

June, the month of roses—also the month of brides, sweet girl graduates, and other things that poets rave over and the less poetic rave about in this particular June time, is putting forth the signs and proofs of its presence in the usual fashion, aside from some vagaries in connection with the weather. The surest evidence that June is June, apart from the calendar, is in the breaking out of the baccalaureate address and the harvesting of the annual crop of diplomas by the young men and the young women who go forth to solve the problems of the world.

June should not be allowed to pass without a tribute to these graduates of the schools and colleges. Bless their hearts, every one of them! They furnish inspiration for the humorous and satiric paragraphs, but their ideals and their enthusiasm serves the country well, even if the harder school or experience into which they are entering is destined to take a lot of the idealism out of them. Some of the latter quality may stick—enough perhaps to make itself felt in the years to come.

There was a time when idealism of the kind that has characterized the baccalaureate sermons of the men of many scholastic degrees and the essays and orations of the budding citizenry since colleges were founded in the country, was considered "academic." But it has come to pass that leaders in government and in the business world are no longer ashamed to urge and strive by precept and action to make ideals operative in statecraft and in commerce and industry. It is the reward, in some measure, that is coming at last to the perseverance of youth through several generations of graduating hope and enthusiasm. The sweet girl graduate, especially whose essay, prettily tied with pink or blue ribbon, had poor chance of bourgeoning into deeds, has been constitutionally qualified to make her ideals felt through the ballot and in places heretofore limited to men.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor of Jarvis Record.

I thought I'd like to tell you about the Mothers and Daughters Banquet held at Chesapeake May 7th, in the Community Hall. As I'm rather late in writing, you may have heard of it before. But as an old resident of the vicinity it struck me as a wonderful affair for Chesapeake.

Would any of our ancestors of 50 years ago, who now lay sleeping in the quiet village, ever dream of seeing automobiles carrying over 200 women to attend a meeting of this kind? After being absent from the vicinity for some time and returning just before May 7th, I was kindly sent an invitation which I gladly accepted, as I had never attended a banquet of that kind. We arrived at the hall in good time and after paying a very modest fee at the door, went in where three long tables were set in perfect order, with each name on a small card at each place. We went in couples, any one not owning a daughter borrowed someone else. Grace was sung with a good hearty spirit and then we sat down to enjoy the bounties spread before us. At each place was a pretty little paper cup holding a bun. I expected the bun was to eat, but did not know about the cup until I saw my neighbors unfolding them and they turned out to be paper serviettes. We were all hungry and were soon busy getting away with our pretty plate of salad. There were jellies and fruit in abundance. When we felt we'd had nearly enough, a heaping plate of ice cream and cake was served, followed by coffee.

The waiters were the young men of the surrounding country and a fine looking bunch they were, with white shirts and caps with orange bows and handkerchiefs to match. Surely their mothers should be proud of them. One could see they had all been trained to work, each one on the job edging his way through a most narrow space, which none but a well trained athlete could get through.

Then we had speeches. Mrs. Mitchener, speaker for the evening, is most capable and has a clear voice which is easily heard. Then came toasts and replies from women of the surrounding country, and they certainly did speak well. I felt real proud of them and decided they did not need to take a back seat for the women of the cities.

But I could not keep my mind from the main force behind all this, namely, the managing committee, who had worked so hard and planned and operated all this. For what, just to give a pleasant evening to a large number of women? Oh no, not that, but that the women of this fair Canada of ours may be strengthened and uplifted in their daily toil of work and raising families, to help them to raise and train better and purer daughters to lift up the standard for men, for without good women we cannot have good men. So we believe this banquet is one of the means to uplift the moral influence of our young country people and hope each one will be the better of having attended it.

I must now bring this rather long letter to a close, hoping, Mr. Editor, you may have the pleasure of attending a banquet at Chesapeake some time in the near future.

Lightning gives stern lessons to Ontario farmers

OVER and over again, in fact, nearly hundreds of times each year, lightning has proved to Ontario farmers the folly of neglecting to cover their barns with metal roofing and siding. Why delay and why take chances with a wood shingle roof when Corrugated Iron roofing gives protection to your valuable crops against fire by lightning and sparks, and represents a lifelong investment?

Be sure to get the NEW HEAVY WEIGHT COUNCIL STANDARD CORRUGATED IRON with heavy coating of spelter. Don't accept unreliable substitutes.
