NATURE'S PHILOSOPHY

The seasons have again brought autumn around — autumn with its fulfillment of the promises of spring and summer in harvests of field and forest. And now, with its rustle of falling leaves, with its wind gusts that hint of chilling blasts to come, it sounds the last call for outdoor sports. With its sparkling sunshine, its crimsoned and purple forests, its gold-carpeted fields, autumn beckons one and all to go out and play.

Nature is preparing for its winter sleep and autumn has been cast to enact its retiring role. That sleep may mean death of many of this year's glories, but autumn goes about it right gallantly. There is no somberness or mourning or melancholy. It moves cheerily on the way appointed. It dons the most brilliant dresses in nature's wardrobe for its tryst with death. It mixes tonic in the air and serves it to man in invigorating, intoxicating manner, and bids him drink it in, to his good health.

The gods, the Indians and all of nature's people draw philosophy from the change of seasons and learn to face death cheerfully. Why can not civilized persons be as wise?

In The Melting Pot

Hawaii is reported to be no longer a snakeless land, but that may be merely an excuse.

Many a woman who never looked aside a volume of Blackstone is able to lay down the law.

Man likes to blame heredity when it is an acquired trait that causes the trouble.

The harm others may do to a man's reputation is not so serious as what he can do to his character.

"What is health?" an inquirer asks. It's something that folks do not appreciate until they haven't it any more.

HERBERT W. ROBERTS HONORED

A ride through the Niagara gorge was scheduled for the afternoon, the trolley car following the contour of the river bank and giving a close-up of the swiftly moving stream. The great awesome whirlpool comes into view; and then the terrible rapids, where the waves are dashing up high against the rocks and tossing about in a sort of mad fury as if to make one realize more keenly their enormous force and overwhelming power. An abrupt turn of the gorge brings Lewison into sight, with the river now pacified and flowing quietly out to sea. A red funnelled ship is at the dock, seemingly like a Cunard ocean liner in miniature. It is the Canadian Pacific boat making daily trips out across Lake Ontario. The vastness of this inland lake is best appreciated when, after half an hour's sail, there is no land in sight as the sturdy little steamer churns its way along. Gradually something grows bigger and bigger on the horizon and by nine o'clock the boat docks at Toronto, the Queen City of Canada. There is a crowd at the wharf, but we are successfully collared and turn to shake hands heartily with the erudite Herbert W. Roberts, the Canadian correspondent for the Deaf-Mutes Journal, who has a striking resemblance to Manhattan's best known man-about-town — our debonair Harry Powell.

The hospitable Roberts homestead, "Mora Glen," claims us as its guest for a few days. We find that our prolific writer does not feed on adjectives and adverbs at meal times as was supposed. His good wife is a mistress of the culinary art, it is our pleasure to discover. Mr. Roberts is a gentleman of high mental caliber and courteous of manner, and is one of the leaders in his community. Up in his study is a fine, large golden oak desk, a gift from the deaf as a testimonial of the esteem in which he is held. And it is on this self-same desk that our scribe grinds out the weekly news letters, which are invisible links that hold the deaf of Canada together in a bond of mutual interest.

Toronto is a very clean city, with wide streets. Street car service is excellent, being owned by the municipality. Each car carries a broom as part of the equipment. Other interesting things noted were tall policemen and their blue helmets, which accentuated their height, and the "self-service" news-stands everywhere. You take your favorite paper and drop the coin in a box. The stands are so shaped to protect the papers from the rain. Instead of the familiar green letter boxes, in Canada they are all brilliant red. So if any "rube" from the Canadian wilds tries to mail his letters in New York City and unintentionally calls out the fire department, he can hardly be blamed for the slight mistake.

adam and gravel roads. These stock piles will be placed at intersections where the foreman can conveniently get material when required.

Toronto is favored with a fine bathing beach near by. A short walk or ride brings the natives to "Sun-nyside" on the lake, with a long stretch of clean sand. No tiresome ride in the crowded subway or elevated just to get a breath of sea air. At a picnic in a nearby park we enjoyed meeting persons of familiar names, such as McGillivray, Whealy, Brethour, Shepherd, Grooms. The Roberts gave a party and we became acquainted with the Elliots, Muriel Allen, Grace Hardy, Alma Brown and Ethel Griffith, who made us opine Toronto would be a nice place to live in. The Queen City can boast of its queens and they seemed plentiful. Hardly saw any that used rouge and lipstick — they all looked clean and wholesome, well and modestly dressed. Noticed a large preponderance of auburn-haired girls, their sun-lit hair constantly reminding us of old school days, when as a small boy we used to gaze with secret admiration at a tall and stately young woman, to us the sum of all queenliness — one Anna Lavina McPhail.

Time passes quickly in good company, our few days are up, and reluctantly we resume our journey. After a farewell luncheon with Friend Roberts, we board the Canadian Pacific Limited for a 200-mile ride through a most prosperous farm region to Kingston, Ontario. Along the way we pass through Belleville, and have a good look at the school for the deaf, finely located at the top of a hill overlooking Lake Ontario. — W. A. Renner.

THE OCTOBER ROD AND GUN

Featured by an exceptionally attractive cover design, the first of a series of outdoor paintings from the brush of the well known Canadian artist, Major Allan Brooks, the October issue of "Rod and Gun and Canadian Silver Fox News" has just been published. The issue contains many interesting articles and stories having to do with hunting and fishing trips in various parts of Canada, while the regular department on angling, shooting, Outdoor Talk, kennel and trapping contain much useful information on the latest development in their respective branches.

A complete verbatim report of the proceedings of the annual meeting of the Canadian National Silver Fox Breeders' Association is included in this month's issue of Canadian Silver Fox News. In addition, there are several splendid articles on various points of the rapidly growing industry.

"Rod and Gun and Canadian Silver Fox News" is published monthly by W. J. Taylor, Ltd., Woodstock, Ont.
