THE RADIO PROBLEM

The radio situation has settled down to a fight between powerful stations going national broadcasting and the weak local stations. The Federal Radio Commission must decide whether there is a public demand for the local stations, and, if not, whether it can ignore the property rights of these stations and silence them for all time.

Because their programs are usually of a high standard the larger stations enjoy the greatest popularity. Local stations are tolerated as long as they do not interfere with stations broadcasting a better program and are actually a boon when broadcasting during the periods the large stations are off the air.

The Independent Broadcasters' Association, which is defending the 162 stations ordered off the air, may be partly right in its argument that communities have the same right to local radio stations as they have to local newspapers. This argument might stand up if the communities were defending this right claimed for them by their local broadcasting stations. In most instances communities affected have evinced little concern whether their local station stands or falls.

Radio should not become a national monopoly and it will not develop into that. Neither should it remain a bedlam of static and interference of little value to anyone. When the federal commission protects the best stations against interference it is acting in the interests of the radio public.

MAN: BRAGGARD

Man is an inconsistent animal at best. And he is a large bundle of boasting at all times. Associating the two traits men boast in one breath and call their fellows braggards in the next. Though our dual standard of human appraisal will not permit of self-praise, the tradesman, the manufacturer and the auctioneer boast of the superiority of their wares and are not charged with complacency even by their competitors in business. Self-praise in individuals is not pardonable even of such individuals who can prove their boastful claims. The business man is never charged with braggadocio but he must make good his claims or bear the indelible stamp of the cheat and fraud. The boasters of will always find their out. Continuing the analysis this duality of boasting may be carried to communities, nations, fraternal orders, religions, racial distinctions, automobiles, horses, wives and so on down to pigs and whatnot. Boastful beings brag up their country, towns, cars, automobiles, and pigs and accuse the other fellow of prejudice and partisanship when he ventures to name the fine points of his country, political party and wife. "The faults which men condemn are their own."

There is an ancient fable which contemplates boasting in this manner: A man walking with that noble animal, the lion, showed the lion in the ostentation of human superiority a sign of a man slaying a lion. Upon which the lion said—very justly, we lions are none of us painters, else we could show a hundred men killed by lions for one lion killed by a man.

BUILD A FOUNDATION, TOO

There was a sign in a savings bank window the other day which said: "If you dream castles in the air, save and put a foundation under them."

Once there was a young man who had always dreamed of being wealthy. As a boy he pictured himself dressed in the height of fashion, snappy cut to his clothes, and all that, walking down Main street. People on the sidewalk would point him out, saying, "Yes, there's Sam Green, young fellow, but smart. Yes, sir, smart. Owns that big house on the hill, and has got a good pile selted down already. Must be worth $100,000."

So Sam, as an initial step toward wealth, saved, and after a time reached his first goal, the $1,000 goal after which 'tis said the money just flows.

But about this time Sam got a girl, and then he wanted to make quite a splash. He wasn't going to take her into any little two by four house; he was going to have that house on the hill. So Sam began looking around for ways to help that $2,000 grow, and like many a thrifty, but too impatient young man, bought wildcat stock. And the $1,000 was gone and with it Sam's dream of the house on the hill and all the rest.

To return to the ad in the bank window, "If you dream castles in the air, save and put a foundation under them." But be sure the foundation is a solid one.

ADENOIDS

During the summer months, the symptoms caused by adenoids are not as noticeable as in winter. They are referred to now because this is an opportune time for having them attended to.

Adenoids are tumour-like growths that develop in the passage between the nose and throat. Very young children may have adenoids. The majority of cases occur in children from eighteen months to six years of age.

The presence of adenoids usually causes what is apparently a chronic cold in the head, with a great deal of discharge from the nose. These symptoms, with snuffles, occur during the winter season. Cough is frequently associated with the condition.

If the growths are large, the child will be a mouth-breather—breathing through the mouth day and night, because of the natural breathing-space through the nose is blocked. This gives rise to snoring.

In advanced cases, the child has a characteristic appearance of the face. The open mouth gives a stupid expression, the nostrils are small and pinched, the upper lip is thickened. The voice may have a nasal twang. The hearing may be impaired. Bed-wetting may be part of the symptom.

Complete removal is the only treatment for adenoids of any severity.

Parents who have been advised by their physician to have an adenoid condition corrected in their child should do so. Parents of children who show evidence of adenoids, as described, should have the children examined to find out the condition. The treatment of such a condition is advised because it interferes with the normal development of the child, lowers his level of physical fitness and, if severe, results in a permanent deformity of the mouth and face.

ROD AND GUN AND CANADIAN SILVER FOX NEWS

The August issue of "Rod and Gun and Canadian Silver Fox News," which is just published, contains a highly interesting collection of yarns and stories of outdoor Canada and hunting and fishing. In the list there is a very good story of a more unusual humorous type in "So This Is Hunting Moose" by John Richmond. The contents also include several articles of a conservative note, as well as useful information for hunters, fishermen and campers.

The Guns and Ammunition department, edited by C. S. Landis, includes much useful material for the gun crank, while anglers, outdoorsmen, campers and dogmen are well catered to in the special departments edited by well known authorities. "The Canadian Silver Fox News" section contains a very complete report of the annual meeting of the Canadian National Silver Fox Breeders' Association.

"Rod and Gun and Canadian Silver Fox News" is published monthly by W. J. Taylor Ltd., Woodstock, Ont.

On the Job

over all roads
in all weathers
at all times

WITH the superb ease of a thoroughbred that takes all in its stride, the "Bigger and Better" Chevrolet never falters in the most trying circumstances—proves its mettle on the steepest grades and in the face of the greatest obstacles.

The ruggedness of Chevrolet construction alone makes these things possible. There is no part of the engine—of the chassis—of the body that was not designed primarily for rugged endurance—put to the test again and again on the General Motors Proving Ground.

As a result the "Bigger and Better" Chevrolet sturdily climbs without a halt, the steep slopes of the Rockies, and ploughs its way through the deep mud and gumbo of half-made peat trails. In whatever conditions it may be placed, the splendid ruggedness of Chevrolet remains loyal in the service of its owner.

As long life has become proverbial—the very name Chevrolet is a synonym for strength that endures.

The "Bigger and Better" Chevrolet—beautiful in form—functional in appointments—supremely rugged in construction—powered by the famous Valve-in-head engine—offers solid, enduring, trustworthy performance even under adverse conditions.

No matter what the roads—no matter what the weather—at all times the "Bigger and Better" Chevrolet stays on the JOB.

The G.M.A.C. . . General Motors' consolidated payment plan affords the most convenient and economical way of buying your Chevrolet on time.
