THE CORRESPONDENT'S PLEA If we could write the things we feel, Could make imagination real-If pencil, paper, pen and ink Had but the gift to make us think. We'd shed our studied attitudes, limane remarks and platitudes. And write our missives fust as though They went to people whom we know.

We'd scorn such terms as "even date" and "lu reply we beg to state,"
"Regarding" would not be "in re," Our meanings would be plain as day. "Yours truly" we would not "remain" From stilted phrases we'd refrain-How vivid would our letters be in simple phraseology!

No "15th inst," or "30th ult," Our readers' sense would insult; From floral bombast like "esteeme Our sentences would be redeemed. In homely words and simple style We'd write each letter with a smile-What a difference goodness knows.

If we could write plain English prose!

London Hit Tells About Girl Who Had Prince for a Partner Twice Removed

London-The Prince of Wales can and often does enjoy a joke at his own expense. A humorous alimsion to his many achievements, whether on the hunting field, at golf, or at the him, and no resentment.

Such an allusion is most likely to be made on the stage, and it is the duty of the Lord Chamberlain, the censor of plays, to see that it is withobject, there is an end to the matter; and he has raised no objection to his name being mentioned in a song which is one of the hits of a revue now running in London.

As Americans know, the heir to the British throne is found of dancing and that he is catholic in his choice of partners. When he patronises a pale, bloodless girls need plenty of dance, whether it be a patrician or a nourishment, plenty of sleep and reguplebian affair, he does not just "look lar out-of-door exercise.
