Large Crowd Witnessed Laying of Corner Stone

Interesting Ceremony Held on Sunday, September 7th at the Port Dover Mausoleum

"I pronounce this stone well and truly laid, On the level and the square. May our love be on the square of Action and Truth."

The laying of the corner stone at the Port Dover Community Mausoleum on Sunday afternoon last provided a welcomed opportunity for hundreds of citizens of Port Dover and surrounding country to "inspect" the mausoleum and appreciate more fully the magnitude of the great structure and the manner in which the work has been carried out. For months past the progress of construction has been followed with interest, for it is generally recognized that exceptionally few, if indeed any, of the size of Port Dover can boast of a structure of such proportions, such magnificence, and occupying such a most imposing site as that of the Port Dover Mausoleum, and if the work continues along the same masterful lines as has been evident thus far, it will be truly said of the builders

"They builded better than they knew."

Sunday's attendance at the ceremony bore testimony of the approval of the citizens to the building of the mausoleum and the entire service was followed with reverence and sincerity. The afternoon's proceedings were sponsored by the Port Dover Cemetery Co., Limited, the secretary, R. M. Taylor, acting as chairman.

Mr. Taylor took advantage of the occasion to review the work of the company since its formation in 1867, its sound financial position and the purchase of land on which the mausoleum stands, to take care of future expansion.

Earth Grave Repulsive

Rev. Mr. Sible, deputizing for Rev. Donald MacInnes, extended congratulations and said the enterprise was a very fine one.

We all hope to die in such a manner as to permit a respectful burial. Burial of our dead in a place like this is not new, but a very old custom. Burying the dead in crypts of various kinds, we cannot state how far back these things anti-date. The tomb of Macchelah, meaning double, had a double entrance and in it were buried Isaac, Rachel and Leah.

It doesn't matter what we ministers say there is something sad about death, and I must say that being buried in the earth doesn't appeal to me. There is something about it that is repulsive. To-day the grave is made less repulsive. When they say "Earth to earth, dust to dust, ashes to ashes" how it grates upon our hearts and it is to make burial seem less repulsive today that the earth dug up is covered with a green grass mat, the casket is covered with flowers and everything is done to make it seem less terrible. I must say that if I were as well off as many of you, I would certainly secure a crypt in this beautiful place. I honestly think the scheme is a very fine one, and appreciate the efforts that are being put forth, and I hope that there will be plenty of people who will purchase crypts in this building.

Mr. S. L. Butler, chairman of the Cemetery Co., said that when completed the Port Dover Mausoleum will be the finest and most beautiful structure in the Dominion of Canada.

A. C. Stewart

Mr. A. C. Stewart, president and general manager of A. C. Stewart & Co., Limited, the builders of the Port Dover Mausoleum, called upon by the chairman for a few words, said, in part:

"I hope you will not think it presumptuous that I, the builder of this place, should address a few remarks today. We feel that we have, for the erection of this mausoleum, the finest site in the Province of Ontario, or even in the Dominion. The structure is worthy of the site it occupies. We have tried to get the very finest material throughout in construction. There are stones in the pyramids of Egypt which none of our machines could lift, single stones which weigh 250 tons. We will not try to compete with this but we will do the best we can according to our limitations.

The outside of Port Dover Community Mausoleum is to be covered with Queenston stone, the same stone out of which Brock's monument is erected. We feel that perhaps while it might be more expensive to bring this stone from Queenston, we are justified in buying it, for the best is none too good. The inside of the mausoleum will be finished in this white stone, except for the face of the crypts, which latter will be finished in marble.

I may say that the finest buildings in the world are mausoleums: Taj Mahal in India; Queen Artemelia to her husband, Mausolus, in Asia Minor—hence the name, mausoleum. I have seen the tombs of Shakespeare, Byron, John Bunyan, and the immortal Robert Burns.

This is the first example in this district of a community mausoleum. You can clearly understand that after all, we alone cannot erect this building. This structure cannot be built without the support of the community. The building will be made worthy of the purchasers. We have had wonderful support, and I believe I am safe in saying that the building will be worthy of the site it occupies.

Corner Stone Laid

Reeve George L. Miller, Jarvis, addressing the gathering preparatory to the laying of the corner stone, said that it was a great pleasure to have the privilege of addressing an audience on an occasion of this kind. In fact this is the first mausoleum that I have ever been close to and I have taken a peculiar fancy to this building since it was first started. There are different systems of burial for the dead, possibly they have never been explained to you. We all wish to know the way we are going to be buried when we are dead. The love which we have for humanity is displayed by the burial of the dead, so I say to you, ladies and gentlemen, that the brotherhood of man and the Fatherhood of God is what has caused us to build this place. Burial is a method adopted by civilized nations of disposing of the dead by committing them to earth. The tendency is to bury the dead out of sight of the living, and various methods have been used in this connection. They are resolved into three classifications: 1, Closing up the body in earth or stone; 2, Cremation—the burning of the body and scattering the ashes; 3, Embalming the body.

The cave dwellers of France and Belgium buried their dead in rock crevices. The later stone age people of Europe buried their dead in chambered burrows and cairns. The bronze age buried in stone cists, set in the ground in natural eminences of sand or gravel.

Cremation was practised with simple inhumation throughout the prehistoric period.

The stone cist became the stone lined grave of the early Christian cemeteries, and the stone sarcophagus of the time of the Egyptian kings who built the pyramids, continued throughout the middle ages.

In the early centuries of the Christian era the Christians at Rome had buried their dead in the Catacombs, a series of subterranean excavations consisting of long horizontal passages with recesses on either side, arranged in tiers for the reception of the bodies. The bodies were closed in by slabs bearing inscribed memorials and emblems of the faith, and during the persecutions in the second century were used as places of worship, thus establishing the association of church and cemetery, which has continued on and on until the present time. But it was not until the ninth century that the consecration of cemeteries became customary.

The art of embalming was learned about this time by the Christian church in Palestine, supposedly from
