SUNDAY SCHOOL

The Sunday schools of the land are getting under way again after a period of vacation or desultory attendance. Those who take upon themselves the burden of the religious education of youth are ready to buckle down to what is conceded a real job. Young people do not turn out to Sunday school as they did a generation or two ago. The reason why would be interesting and valuable.

Time was when every child in every community dressed in his best on Sunday morning and started off to the church school fortified with his lesson learned during the week. He memorized the golden text and, likely as not, a considerable number of verses from the Bible. A wholesome taste for Biblical literature and a facility in Biblical quotation were usually imparted in the Sunday school.

But times have changed. A college professor recently discovered that his class in English literature could not identify 20 per cent of the Biblical allusions to be found in a selected group of Tennyson's poems. Familiarity with the Bible and attendance upon Sunday school are marked by the same ratio of decline.

The Sunday school today contends with competitors never thought of in the olden days. The waning power of parental authority is another enemy of stated religious education. But the great weakness lies in the antiquated equipment and the outgrown practices of backward churches. The contrast between the public school and some Sunday schools is pathetic. The child feels this disparity even though he may not analyze it.

Happily, the churches understand this weakness and are boldly attacking it. The period of transition is upon the Sunday school and upon methods in religious education. The problem is a big one but it can and will be solved.

That it must be solved is the conviction of every true Canadian, whether churchgoer or not. Religious education is every bit as fundamental to the welfare and happiness of a nation as secular education. It must not decline either in favor or in usefulness. It must not even lag behind.

BIG BUSINESS

There are three distinct shopping seasons in the year—fall, Christmas and Easter—and not the least popular of these is the former. The fall and winter seasons are especially devoted to the renewal of the personal wardrobe by both men and women and in this they are different from the Christmas shopping period.

The autumn months may be said to be peculiarly adapted for shopping. The days are bright and cool, the stores have been restocked, the weeks afford more time for store-touring and there are so many things which must be purchased in the way of personal attire and household needs. It has become a national custom for the family as the vacation season closes in the late summer to concentrate its budgeting and saving on the requirements of the fall and winter. The anticipation of the fall shopping is quite as pleasurable as the actual shopping is necessary. Everybody saves or it participates in it.

That the fall months are bumper shopping times for the local business places is manifest. Everywhere are visible the unmistakable signs of business activity. The show windows are more brilliant, the show cases and shelves are piled high with fresh merchandise and the stores show more bustling with eager customers.

The merchants are augmenting this business boom and aiding the shopping public by increasing their newspaper advertising. This advertising gives to both merchant and customer an additional sales force and another show window.

DISADVANTAGES IN BIGNESS

There comes a time, regardless of what the boosters say, when continued growth ceases to be an asset to a city and becomes instead a positive menace to much of that which the community holds dear. In such a situation London finds herself today. Year by year the sprawling metropolis of the British Empire bites deeper into adjacent territory. And with every encroachment loss of identity is threatened to some historic shrine, to places that for generations have had an individuality and a charm of their own, which largely disappears as they are absorbed by suburban London.

In the vicinity of Stoke Poges parish, which, when Gray wrote the famous "Elegy," was some 20 miles from London, it is the suburbanite and not the plowman who "homeward plods his weary way" these evenings. A new traffic highway to London threatens the peaceful scene of William Penn's grave. The tooth of time and the claw of the real estate agent have been as ruthless to London's bordering frame of historic places as the North Sea has been to ancient Dunwich.

There is food for thought and a cause for sobering concern for many American communities in Old London's present emotions. Bigness for mere bigness' sake is no nobler an ambition than money for money's sake. Many communities are sacrificing their richest assets to their mania for greater population. After it is too late they discover they have traded their heritage for a white elephant. There must be progress, but mere growth in area and population does not spell progress.

RECORD RAMBLINGS

The way to be happily married is to obey the laws and pay no attention to the inlaws.

The man at the bottom of most things is usually up a tree. Men who catch on to things too quickly let go the same way.

The future usually becomes the past without anything happening.

How a man must suffer if he has a sheik complex and a bald spot. Another sad sign of the times is the disposition of newly-weds to buy a one-seated car.

Affluence consists in ability to keep the old car instead of trading it in on the new one.

The way to have some of the best families ask you to call again is to be a bill collector.

Americanism: Passing laws against the public drinkingcup; Consuming nameless beverages from a mason jar.

The hard part of raising children is to make them understand that you are the instructor, not an example.

Man isn't the only one whose hereafter is uncertain. A cotton seed never knows whether it will be hog-lard or olive oil.

HEALTH SERVICE of the CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSN.

BE FAIR

If you have disease germs in your system, keep them to yourself. You do not get rid of them by passing a few on to someone else. If you have a cold, keep it to yourself. Be fair; protect others from disease in the same way that you expect them to protect you. It is not easy, living as most of us do, to keep out of reach of the other person's germs. It is only fair that we should all do our best to limit their spread.

To begin with, there are certain simple habits of what we might call ordinary decency that everyone can practice, and which would do much to prevent the spread of disease germs. The first is to use the handkerchief to sneeze and to cough into. If the sneeze or cough catches one unawares, the head can be lowered and the sneeze or cough directed at the ground, rather than into the faces of those around.

The next step is never to use a common drinking-cup, common towel or common wash-cloth. The reason is that such articles become soiled with body secretions, and it is in these secretions that disease germs leave the body and may be transferred to another person.

It should not be necessary to warn against such obvious dangers as using the saliva to moisten the handkerchief to clean baby's face, or to give the baby something off the fork or spoon that has been in someone's mouth. There is one important practice for everyone, and that is the washing of hands before eating. Our hands become soiled. We should train ourselves to keep them away from our faces. We should never touch food without having thoroughly washed the hands. In this practice lies much of our means of protecting ourselves from communicable diseases.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered by letter. Questions as to diagnosis and treatment will not be answered.

Distance, so far as the Canadian Pacific is concerned appears to be measured no longer in miles. Time is the important factor and, at least in respect of package goods, the Canadian Atlantic and Pacific routes are drawing closer each year. Here, Captain Brintnell is signing for Canadian Pacific express packages to be carried over the airway between Winnipeg and Calgary. For several months the Company has operated an air service between Rimouski, Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto. The new link in the air chain was forged under auspices of Premier Bracken of Manitoba.
