

THE JARVIS RECORD

51st Year No. 20

JARVIS, ONT., THURSDAY, AUGUST 8th, 1929

$1.50 Per Year. $2.00 to United States. Single Copies, 5c Each

ST. PAUL'S W. A. MEETS RECTOR TO LEAVE JARVIS

St. Paul's W. A. met at the Rectory on Tuesday afternoon, July 30th. The devotional exercises were taken by the Rector and after the business of the month was gone over, the hostess served a dainty lunch. The out-of-town visitors were: Rev. and Mrs. Bennetts of Waterdown, Ont., Mrs. C. Parsons of Spokane, Wash., Mrs. L. Parsons of St. Thomas, Ont., Mrs. H. Sharpe of St. Petersburg, Fla., and Miss A. Rodgers of Simcoe, Ont. Owing to the Rector's ill health, Mr. and Mrs. Walling will be leaving Jarvis shortly for Vancouver and much regret was felt by all.

MILLER-ALLEN

The marriage of Miss Adria E. Allen, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Allen of Aylmer, Ont., and Mr. R. St. Clair Miller, second son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Miller of Jarvis, Ont., was solemnized on the 5th inst. at the summer home of the bride's parents at Port Bruce. At 3 p.m. the bride, escorted by her father, appeared before an arch of evergreens and summer flowers where the ceremony was performed by Rev. P. E. Deeth of Jarvis. The bride, who was unattended, was tastefully attired in a beige and coral georgette ensemble with hat and shoes to match and corsage of butterfly roses. At the conclusion of the ceremony luncheon was served to upwards of fifty guests at the Rocabore Inn. The happy couple will spend a fortnight camping before being at home to their friends at Aylmer, Ont.

REBEKAH INSTALLATION

On Tuesday evening, July 23rd, the following officers of Silver Star Rebeekah Lodge, No. 285, were installed into office by the installing officers of Silver Lake, D. D. P. Sis Sadie Greenbury of Port Dover and staff: J.F.N.G.—Sis Kate Miller N.G.—Sis Pearl Ineson V.G.—Sis Alice Robinson R.S.—Sis Florence F.S.—Sis Anne Hoskin Treas.—Sis Ada Harris War.—Sis Rose Wride Con.—Sis Belle McDonald E.S.N.G.—Bro. James Ineson L.S.N.G.—Bro. Edward Miller R.S.V.G.—Sis Gladys Peacock L.S.V.G.—Sis Mabel Johnson J.G.—Sis Rebecca Jones O.G.—Bro. Wm. Hoskin Chap.—Sis Mary Brown Musician—Sis Lizzie Howard

BASEBALL AT NANTICOKE

On Saturday, August 10th, at 6:30 sharp, the league leading Gore sluggers are coming to Nanticoke to meet the local nine and it is sure to be a hard game. Gore is leading the league by one game and a win for Nanticoke will put them in a tie for first place. The following week Hagersville visits Nanticoke for the final game of the season. This game will be on Thursday, August 15th, at 6:30. The championships of the league depend entirely upon these two games as any one of the three teams has a chance to win. So be on hand early and see two of the best games of the season. The standing of the league is as follows:

	Won	Lost
Gore	4	3
Nanticoke	3	3
Hagersville	3	4

CARTAGE

I am in the business for ALL KINDS OF TRUCKING LOCAL AND LONG DISTANCE Rates Reasonable HAROLD MILLER PHONE 55 JARVIS

LOCAL & GENERAL

Wedding bells will be ringing here this week.

A large number from here attended the centennial celebration at Simcoe.

The Jackson-Evans annual reunion was held in Hickory Beach Park on Thursday last.

George Histed after a few weeks' holidays, returned to his duties on Thursday last.

Mrs. Silas Snyder spent Sunday and Monday attending the Centennial at Simcoe.

Mr. James Deller of Flint, Mich., visited with relatives and friends here last week.

Mrs. J. Butcher entertained a few ladies on Saturday evening in honor of Mrs. H. Parsons.

Miss Zelma Rodgers and Miss Mary Hair spent the holiday viewing the wonders of Niagara.

Mr. Henry Donaldson returned to Toronto after spending a week with Mrs. Mary Abraham.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Evans of Toronto, called on Jarvis folks enroute to the Simcoe Centennial.

Mrs. Pettit of Hamilton, and Miss Foster of Port Robinson, visited with friends in town last week-end.

Mrs. Hanson and Isaac Stickwood of Toronto spent the holiday with Mr. and Mrs. R. A. McCarter.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Newman left on Thursday last to spend a few days with his brother in Brantford.

Mrs. John Hodgson of Detroit, visited with her parents here, Mr. and Mrs. James Davidson, during the past week.

Mrs. G. E. McCulloch and daughter Francis returned to Toronto on Tuesday, after spending a month at Woodlawn.

Mrs. Fred Goodlett and family have returned to their home in Delhi after a visit with her father here, D. M. Allen.

Miss A. Lattimer is spending a few days with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Griffith, in Hagersville.

Rev. E. R. Hall, of Lincoln Avenue United church, Galt, occupied the pulpit in Knox Presbyterian church on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Davidson and family moved to Hamilton on Monday last, where they intend to make their future home.

Mrs. Allen and daughter Lenora, Mrs. Schreiber, Miss Fallis and Mrs. H. Abraham, spent Friday at Erie Beach and Niagara Falls.

Misses Irene and Stella Jones of Toronto, spent the week-end with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Jones, and other relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. Sinclair (nee Helen McKim) visited with friends in town last week, prior to their leaving for their home in Sault Ste. Marie.

T. Forsyth and son William, who have been visiting for the past month in Jarvis and vicinity, returned to their home in Detroit this morning.

Miss Marguerite Peacock, accompanied by her aunt, Miss Lizzie Rodgers, returned home on Saturday, having spent the past week in Detroit.

Mrs. Hannah Parsons of Spokane, Wash., who has been the guest of Mrs. Zetta Jacques, left on Tuesday to spend a week with Mrs. Percy Rock.

Rev. and Mrs. W. T. Brown and two little girls with friends from Buffalo, motored through town on Thursday last and called on old friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevenette are staying at Mrs. R. Rodgers for a month. Mr. Stevenette is relieving at the station while Mr. Fred Newman is holidaying.

Messrs. Geo. L. Miller, M. F. Hewson, John Wodham, Fred Reicheld and Joe Owen, attended the funeral of a well known and highly esteemed resident of Port Dover, who recently celebrated his 90th birthday. He is an uncle of Ex-Reeve Geo. L. Miller of Jarvis.

MR. ALEX MILLER

BRIGADE BOYS ENJOY OUTING

On Monday, August 5th, eleven members of the Jarvis Fire Brigade journeyed to York Township to attend the demonstration of the Ontario Firemen's Association, which was greatly enjoyed by all.

A feature of the event was the big parade, almost 3 miles long, comprising the various fire apparatus, firemen, floats, bands, etc. The boys were compelled to hoof it for six miles, but no one was disappointed at the windup with the exception of Bill Brennan.

Taking it all in all the boys behaved themselves creditably, allowing for a few minor capers. Noticeable was the wonderful goose-step of the truck, which displayed wonderful ability to keep out of step no matter as to tune of the band ahead or the drum corps in the rear. We might mention that the boys who played fortitude despite the fact that he was suffering from gout. Albert Lenf was hauled upon the carpet by Chief Elliott for inviting two young flappers to occupy the seat in the truck with him. Bill was sore because he had changed places with Albert too soon. The boys attribute the poor step in the parade due to the fact that he was trying to look over the truck in order to keep an eye on Albert. Jack Mitchell felt out of luck and as soon as the parade entered the grounds he interviewed a gypsy fortune teller. Judging by the expression on his face when he emerged from the tent, the interview must have had the desired effect. He gave a wink to Wilfred Willis, who next entered the lion's den. Talk about the feats of powerfully built men — they had nothing on Wilfie. When he reappeared he had three pairs of ladies' silk hose to his credit. We were afraid to send any more candidates after that, and it took the combined strength of the members to keep Alvin Mitchell out of the tent. Jim Johnson must have entered the tent later in the afternoon for he displayed a gold (?) watch which he claimed he had won (?) At this juncture Hoebel was missing and a searching party organized. It seemed almost impossible that he had any ambition left after marching 6 miles in the parade, but it's miraculous what effects gallstones produce on him. He certainly had gall — he was discovered on the floor of the dancing pavillion, swinging a flapper in a short blue dress and bare legs. Poe Banks was a hard one to keep track of, for we knew he was trying to locate the "Teacher" he had become acquainted with earlier in the day. Someone is always taking the joy out of life — imagine Charlie Powell enjoying a rest! He couldn't even stop work on a civic holiday, for he spent all of his time with a hammer, making 35-lb. strokes with C. N. R. regularity — and paying for the privilege of doing it. The boys were thankful to have Bert Fitzgerald with them again, for without his traffic-handling ability the boys would have been lost — yes, and lost in Hamilton at that!

Although we are citing only a few minor incidents — we dare not make the real facts public — if we did, Bob McCarter would stay up all night in order to prevent the boys from sneaking out of town the next time

REV. J. A. NEILL PREACHES HIS FAREWELL SERMON

The Rev. J. A. Neill, former pastor of the Chesapeake United church, preached his farewell sermon on Sunday, June 30th. His text was found in Luke 10:42. He said:

"In thinking of a message for the last Sunday, I could not think of a better than the emphasis on the needful — that which is needed in life. I am very glad to meet you here this afternoon and as I look back over the five years that have gone by I am very thankful for the loyalty of the people in the church services. As I look over the congregation I see some who have been very faithful and I want to thank them for contributing to them. I want to carry away many memories that are connected with this church and congregation.

"Now, when we come to think of the world in which we live, there are two classes of people — those interested in the best things, and those indifferent to the best things — those interested in the service of our Master and those indifferent to it. All are seeking rest; but it is a very peculiar method some have. They are so busy that they forget the abundance of a man's life consists not in the things that he possesses. If we were to look into our hearts, I wonder if we would not find that our surrender to the teaching of the Divine Savior is only a partial one. If we were to surrender to Him our whole hearts how much worth while our lives would be.

"As I look over the world, I can think of only one remedy for the needs of humanity and that is Christ. When as we look over the busy world we think that it has forgotten the Christ and yet we think those who are criticizing are skeptical because they do not know the Master. Their lives have not been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the noonday brightness of man's creative life have been in touch with His and they do not see where they are drifting. Bertrand Russell, a brilliant scholar, says: "Man is the product of cause which have no prevision of the end they are achieving; that his origin, his growth, his labors, his fears, his loves, and his beliefs, are but the outcome of accidental collocation of atoms. That no fine heroism, no intensity of thought and feeling can preserve an individual life beyond the grave. Nor all the labor of the ages, all the devotion, all the inspiration, all the