CREAMERY MURDER

"Fighting" says that it could be nearly 24 hours before the boys find plenty of fresh donations in the lawn surrounding this plant.

The Buttermilkers' feast is still on display. Anyone desiring to see something in the line of unique work of art, don't fail to give it an inspection.

Since shipping is heavy just now, Mr. Stone finds himself very much crowded for spare time.

We are glad to report that it was a false alarm of burglars being at the plant on Monday night last, as it was only three of the boys doing some repair work.

The Buttermilkers sure got their fill of ice cream last Saturday, owing to a few gallons being left over Friday.

Sleepiness was the prevailing factor in this establishment Saturday.

It is understood Pigskin and Happy are trying to become regulars on the Buttermilkers' liemp.

Grant says he had altogether too much available gas on his stomach to do justice to the game on Friday.

Fitz wants to know the definition of a calithumpian. Will someone kindly enlighten him?

The dark finishing lines on the face of the Boosters' coachman was the winning poin for them.

Kindree says, if it hadn't been for

HEALTH HINTS
By Mrs. C. Erwin

DIPHTHERIA
Diphtheria is an acute infectious and contagious disease. It is a disease of childhood, although adults sometimes contract it, even though they have previously had the disease, it can be taken again. It is a putrid, malignant, ulcerous sore throat. It is caused by the growth of diphtheria bacillus on some of the mucous surfaces of the body and of wounds. This growth generally occurs on the pharynx or throat, the nose, the larynx or in the bronchial tubes.

It may be mild or it may take a very severe form. The attack may begin with a severe chill. High fever, pain in the ear, general aching, loss of strength, pain in swallowing and swelling of the neck. As a rule the appetite is poor and the tongue is coated and the breath offensive. The symptoms of diphtheria may vary from a mild redness of the throat to a most severe formation of a thick grayish white membrane which may cover the whole throat.

Diphtheria is an acute infectious and contagious disease. It is a disease of childhood, although adults sometimes contract it, even though they have previously had the disease, it can be taken again. This growth generally occurs on the pharynx or throat, the nose, the larynx or in the bronchial tubes.

It may be mild or it may take a very severe form. The attack may begin with a severe chill. High fever, pain in the ear, general aching, loss of strength, pain in swallowing and swelling of the neck. As a rule the appetite is poor and the tongue is coated and the breath offensive. The symptoms of diphtheria may vary from a mild redness of the throat to a most severe formation of a thick grayish white membrane which may cover the whole throat.

Prevention of Diphtheria
This disease is transmitted chiefly by direct contact between the person harboring diphtheria bacilli and unprotected well persons. Diphtheria bacilli can survive outside the body on fabric, wood, glass, for varying periods. A dark damp location tends to prolong their vitality; exposure to air and sunlight tends to kill them rapidly.

If a child or an adult has a sore throat with the formation of a thick gray white membrane in any part of the mouth, throat, nose, they should be separated from all well persons, especially if the child or person appears stupid, drowsy or much prostrated, they may have diphtheria and in all cases a physician should be called. He can take cultures from the throat and the examination of these cultures will show whether the diphtheria bacillus is present or not. (Cultures shown in the bacteriological laboratory.)

All persons who have been in intimate contact with children or adults sick, above described, should have cultures taken from their throat and those persons found not to be harboring bacilli, especially children, should leave the home until all danger of infection is past.

Duty of Parents and Nurses
1. Complete isolation of every case of diphtheria must be maintained until two consecutive cultures from the throat and nose show the absence of diphtheria bacilli.
2. Children or teachers in the same house or apartment must not attend school until they have received a certificate from the medical officer of health, which will not be issued before the termination of the case by recovery, death or removal to a hospital.
3. The room occupied by the patient should have as little furniture in it as possible. Carpets, drapery and curtains should be removed before the patient is placed in the room. The sick room should be aired several times daily and the floor, woodwork and furniture frequently wiped with a damp cloth—keep down the dust.
4. If possible, one person should attend the patient and no one else besides the physician should be allowed to enter the room. No visitors should be admitted to the house or apartment until after the final disinfection. Household pets, flies and insects should be excluded from the sickroom.
5. Plates, cups, glasses, knives, forks, spoons, etc., used by the patient should be kept for his use alone and under no circumstances should they be removed or mixed with similar utensils or used by others. Remnants of food should not be removed from the room, they should be burned by the attendant. Dishwater should be disinfected, also any articles or surfaces soiled by discharges should be immediately washed with a carbolic solution.
6. The discharge from nose, mouth ears and eyes of the patient should be received on a cloth which should be burned at once by the attendant.
7. After waiting upon the patient in any way and especially before eating, the hands of the attendant should be thoroughly scrubbed in hot soap-water.
8. During the illness no occupation any kind can be permitted in an apartment or a house occupied by a family. Cases occurring in a room connected with a store or in a farmhouse where dairy produce is sold, patient must either be removed to a hospital or the store closed or the sale of the dairy produce be stopped until after the final disinfection has been performed.

5. In case of death, the body should be wrapped in a sheet saturated with corrosive sublimate placed in the coffin, which should not be opened afterwards. If the patient recovers and the final disinfection of the room and its contents has been ordered by the medical officer of health or the physician, the entire body of the patient should be bathed and the hair washed in hot soap-suds. The patient should then be dressed in clean clothes which have not been in the room during the illness — and removed from the room. The attendant should also take a bath and put on clean clothes before mingling with other people. The clothes worn in the sickroom should be left there to be disinfected.

with the room and its contents. For any circumstances should the body be covered or anything be removed from it until the final disinfection has been performed. In washing of clothes, bedding, etc., look over the disinfectant solution given below.
