SPRINGS OF WATER

What can be more refreshing to a Gred and weary traveller at the end a journey, than a gurgling spring water from which to drink. We mover know the value of water until se find ourselves limited as to the mount we have to use or, as the ancient saying goes, "We never miss the water until the well goes dry." A week ago the supply of water need at to battle the fire that destroyed a large barn and a beautiful dwelling house in Jarvis was limited, and the wall disasterous. Water, one of the gent necessities of life and without which there can be no life exist, neither in the animal, floral or human Me. There are many different kinds water-ocean, lake, mineral stagmant and the refreshing spring water. There is a great difference between the latter two-and they give us an effective contrast between a life of stagnation and a life flowing over with springs of water.

Nothing can be more depressing firm to pause beside a stagnant pool of water. There is no sign of action or life, and if we pause there long esough, our whole personality be genes so depressed that we begin to how like the pool, lifeless and dead. Now many people we meet in our every day life that are just like that soi, no action, lifeless and dead. The muchinery of their life has been idle so long that it is corroded with rust. Such lives are not only detrimental to themselves, but also to the com-

You ask them "How are you to-day?" and the reply comes back full of life, "Just fine, feel lik a million dollars." Another person may come along in five minutes and ask them the same question and their answer is just the same. And so through the whole day, res, through the whole month and gear they are the same, no time to se grumbling and complaining, nothing stagnant or rusty about the machmery of their life. Their whole life is vibrating with action and action atways produces results that are of benefit to themselves and the commanity.

Some years ago, a small town in Western Canada had drifted into a condition of inactivity. People of the town did lots of talking about what should be done; critisized the few that tried to do something, but did nothing themselves. The only action in the tewn was gossip and fault finding Uncle Jack. In 1912 there came to the town a man sent by the missionary society. SCHNE FROM "BROKEN DISHES"

"He who cannot laugh at the play had better see his physician," says the New York Sun of "Broken Dishes," will be presented at the coming Canadian Chautanqua here by the Martin Erwin Players of Canada. "Broken Dishes" is replete with hilarious laughter; tense drams and vivid depiction of the very real sort of people we meet in our daily life. The play unfolds an appealing love story between Elaine, the baby of the family, and the village grocery boy, whom Ma treats with icy scorn. But Pa and Elaine conspire together with surprising and dramatic results "Broken Dishes" is a gem of a play, genuinely moving and uproariously funny.
