PROBLEMS CONCERNING THE DEAF AND DUMB

The Deaf of Canada are now in a great tumult over the introduction of the lip reading system in preference to the sign manual in the School for the Deaf of the Country and now those graduates of the latter system are up in arms. Learning of this a Toronto Daily Star reporter had the following interview with Mr. Herbert W. Roberts on the matter and here is Mr. Roberts' reply given at a meeting of the Bridgden Literary Society in Toronto recently.

"This Bridgden Club is at once the delight and the focusing point of the great deaf fellowship of Toronto!" stated Mrs. Byrne again. "Some four hundred, or so, belong to it in and about the city, and it meets regularly every Saturday evening here in the church, but you must come to the Sunday service if you wish to see these people at their very best."

Nearly every person in the room had graduated from the Ontario School for the Deaf at Belleville. One Mr. A. W. Mason, who is over 80 years of age, was one of the original pupils enrolled during the school's first year, "way back in 1870. Then there was Miss Perry, 98 years of age another of the Belleville class of 1870. These two aged people had scarcely missed a meeting since the Bridgden Club was established by the late F. Bridgden and J. D. Nasmith, who together founded the Wellesly Street Church for the Deaf.

The organization is controlled by a board of fourteen trustees—all deaf men—who are well known in the business life of Toronto. The business agent for the association is Frank A. Moore, 259 Russell Hill Rd. While Mr. Moore is not deaf, he was born of deaf parents and has taken a life long interest in the deaf.

Sign Manual Taken Away
Why doesn't the Belleville school carry on its heritage?" I questioned. "Because they took the sign-manual away from classroom study," cut in Mr. Mason, waving his finger vigorously.

"But I saw the pupils signaling to each other in the building when I was down there recently." I countered. "Yes I know," said Mr. Roberts. "But that is not the same. No one can stop the deaf from talking sign language outside of study hours. It is a God-given gift to all who cannot make themselves plainly understood by speech. In every age and clime people have transmitted thought by signs," he added with conviction.

"Then how about lip-reading?" I countered. Is it not a proper way to teach the deaf to converse?" "Oh certainly. Lip-reading is wonderful. And none of us are against its teaching. It strengthens our fortitude, and allows us to speak with those who are immediately about us, that is, if the light is good and we are closely facing them," he hastily explained. But to deprive the pupils of the right to augment their efforts in the school room by the using of our natural sign-manual is something more than serious. In fact it becomes a matter of paramount importance at times.

"Of course you must remember that when the new system of lip-reading went into vogue at the schools for the deaf, it was popularly acclaimed by many parents, and by the older deaf as well. We all hailed the new phonetics as a great salvation to those who wished to mingle intimately with their more normal fellows in the every day walks of life and occupations. But now, after many years of practical experiment, we who are experienced, have been forced to conclude that while lip-reading should not be lessened in the curriculum of classes, yet the equally important sign-manual should be re-included in all of the studies where the deaf participate.

"I have had particular experience," said Mr. Roberts, speaking to me directly in a well modulated and understandable voice—(He is adept at the lip-reading game, as well as a masterful sign-manual delineator). "For 37 years I have published one full newspaper page each week concerning the deaf in our paper—the Deaf Mute's Journal—and besides, have communicated with almost every school and publication in the world. It has been accepted by the majority of the editors and those teachers whose independence allowed them to assert themselves without fear of losing their jobs, that no cessation of lip-reading should be allowed, but—and here Mr. Roberts stepped close to me—"they also concur in the firm belief that the sign-manual should be re-installed in the classroom work at every school where the deaf or partially deaf are taught.

Want No Political Appointee
"Our Toronto organization is being constantly brought into contact with the graduates of the Belleville and other schools for the deaf," continued Mr. Roberts. "Pupils are finished (Continued on page 8.)

Since Fitz can't get on the old age pension he is trying to get Jim's job.

Thorne seems all fagged out, after a hard days work on Sunday. Jim says he ought to be rested up, as he slept on top of the boiler all the time they were there.

Fitz says Newt must stop in Hagersville for his supper or he would be home earlier from Hamilton each day.

The Manager attended a meeting in Cayuga on Thursday last.

Billie will likely be glad to get back to school after the way his old man made him work during the holidays.

Leota is over staying her holiday in Detroit, there must be something interesting over there.

Record Ramblings

By the looks of the cold sore on Jimmie Woods lip he had better stay away from Galt.

Dr. Jones had almost succeeded in dismissing a talkative patient the other day, when she stopped in the doorway and exclaimed, "Oh Doctor! You didn't look to see if my tongue was coated." "Oh I know it is not," said Doc. "You never find grass growing on a race track."

Evangelistic Optimism of 16-year-old Girl

An optimistic sixteen year old girl has set a high mark in the evangelistic world, of New York by which she hopes to win many of the erring 'uns' to a better life. She is surely striking into deep waters when she condemns bridge parties, etc. However we cannot help wishing Dolores Dudley great success in her optimistic adventure and admire her brave spirit of determination.

Robert Laidlaw's many friends will be pleased to learn that he is getting along as well as can be expected after his unfortunate accident, Thursday night when he was kicked by a cow, breaking his hip. He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital on Friday morning and expects to return this week.

Why 1,400 Big Business Concerns Use Fleets of 5 to Over 1,000 REO SPEED WAGONS

Model "DA" 1-Ton Reo Speed Wagon

... Here's the Reason!

To meet today's intensive competition, trucks must perform two important functions: (1) Reduce distribution costs. (2) Increase business.

Low Distribution Cost
Thousands of truck-wise operators have learned in the costly school of experience, that low distribution cost is the result of moderate first cost of trucks; economical operation; and low depreciation because of long life. Many of these low cost factors. However, a Reo Speed Wagon is the one truck that fulfills all of these requirements.

Increasing Revenue
The faster the run, the greater the profit—particularly in these days of keen competition. Speed Wagons bring to trucking the speed and agility of a roadster. They speed up time schedules. Increase the number of stops and starts for sales, in a given space of time. Because of their speed they make it possible for you to secure and hold additional business in a larger territory. This results in increased business and greater revenue.

Consider, too, this important factor in increasing revenue: Your trucks are moving billboards advertising your business to the community. Their appearance says to thousands of people every day, "A first-class business" or "A second-class business."

Realizing the tremendous advertising importance of trucks that look high-class and that are high-class, Reo builds into Speed Wagons smart, first-class appearance that attracts new business.

1,400 big business concerns have bought fleets of one to over one thousand Speed Wagons because Reo offers the one time-proven truck in which both low cost and the ability to increase business, are combined. Thousands of single truck users buy Speed Wagons for the same reason.

There is a Speed Wagon for every hauling need, capable of cutting your distribution costs and increasing your business. Wheelbase sizes up to 210"; capacities, with trailer, up to 15,000 pounds. (228-2)
