

When Languid And Anemic

When a girl is languid, dull and irritable; when her color fades you may be sure her blood is impoverished. When a girl's blood is poor her nerves are starved and there is serious danger of a decline. Rebuild the blood, strengthen the nerves and good health will follow.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are of untold value as a blood-builder. Concerning them Mrs. John Finin, Howland Station, P.E.I., says: "My daughter was badly run down; pale, nervous and under weight. We decided to give her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After a few boxes she gained in weight, her appetite improved and color came to her cheeks—in fact she fully regained her former good health."

You can get these Pills at all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Payments by Postcard

One of the latest banking ideas is the postcard cheque. It comes from Germany, and is designed to cut down overhead expenses. A perforated strip at one end gives details of the account. This is torn off when the postcard is received, and the cheque is then presented at the bank in the usual way.

What are called postal cheques are also in use in a number of countries, and it is sometimes suggested that world-wide adoption would be advantageous.

Anyone can open a postal cheque account, but the principal advantage claimed for the system is that people who have no account can yet make payments, through the Post Office, to any postal cheque account in any part of the country. This is said to facilitate mail-order business.

Similarly, anyone can receive a payment from any postal cheque account, irrespective of whether he himself has an account or not.

Oil Production in Alberta

Alberta's output of oil during the month of May of this year was slightly higher than that for the corresponding period last year, according to figures compiled in the Department of the Interior from the reports of operators. The 55,463 barrels of naptha produced came from the lime formation in the Turner valley, thirty-nine wells contributing the total. The light crude came from higher horizons in Turner valley and from the Red Coulee field. The total production of light crude was from ten wells, three of which also produced naphtha. Four thousand seven hundred and ninety-seven barrels of light crude were produced in Turner valley in May, 1930. The heavy crude total consists of the output of five wells in the Wainwright field, one in the Ribstone field, and one in the Skiff area.

Dynamite Tears a Hole In Bed of the Atlantic

New York—A great column of water, at least 400 feet wide, rose into the air to a height of about 500 feet recently off Sandy Hook, glistened in the bright sunlight for a moment or two, and then, with a mighty roar, splashed back into the ocean.

The water was blown into the air by 25 tons of dynamite, set off within 1/2 mile of Manhattan's skyscraper district.

The blast tore a deep hole into the ocean bed, into which the sunken Farness Bermuda liner Fort Victoria, which went down a year ago, rolled.

WHEN FOOD SOURS...

Sweeten the Stomach instantly

About two hours after eating many people suffer from sour stomachs. They call it indigestion. It means that the stomach nerves have been over-stimulated. There is excess acid. The way to correct it is with an alkali, which neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

The right way is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia—just a teaspoonful liquid; pleasant, efficient and harmless. But it kills excess acid. It has remained the standard with physicians for more than 50 years.

It is the quick method. Results come almost instantly. It is the approved method. You will never use another when you know.

Be sure to get genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for over fifty years in correcting excess acids. 50c bottles—very cheap. The genuine is always signed—never made in tablet form. Look for the name Phillips' on wrapper and bottle.

Child Who Tilts His Head Sideways May Have Bad Eyes

If a school child holds his head sideways while looking at the blackboard or supports his head on a hand as though he were tired, there is good chance that his eyes have the lens defect called astigmatism. If the child also finds it difficult to write in straight lines but produces written exercise, the lines of which stray up-hill or down-hill across the paper, as the writing of many children does when they first begin to learn, the diagnosis of astigmatism is almost certain and the child's eyes should be examined at once by an oculist who can prescribe properlasses. So Professor H. Pistor of the optical department of the University of Jena, in Germany, told the recent Optical Conference held at Cambridge University, England. A large proportion of school children need glasses, Professor Pistor said, without either teachers or parents discovering this fact until the child has been discouraged by being blamed for poor school work or has acquired actual bodily deformities, like a more or less permanent side-wise tilt of the head in children with astigmatism or a similar forward curvature of the spine in those who are seriously nearsighted. Eyes with astigmatism focus sharply only things in a few directions across the eye. The horizontal lines of printed letters, for example, may be in focus while vertical lines are out of focus or vice versa. Sometimes the only lines precisely in focus are those slanted at one definite angle to left or right. It is the unconscious attempt of owners of such eyes to get things into sharper focus that makes them tilt their heads sidewise.

Indian Village Found in Ashes

Settlements of Hundreds of Years Ago Unearthed Near Brantford

Brantford.—The unearthing of the site of an Indian village, on the banks of the Grand River, about a mile below Chiefswood, the home of the late E. Pauline Johnson, and not far from Middleport, has been reported to the Brant Historical Society.

For some time W. J. Wintemberg of the Archaeological Department, Ottawa, has been conducting researches on the Six Nations Reserve, and this find has been one of the results of his efforts.

Indications are that the remains are those of one of the Attimandaron (or neutral) Indian settlements of some hundreds of years ago, as these people were located throughout this district when Father la Roche Dalton, a Recollet missionary, visited what is now the Grand River Valley in 1626 and in a diary left by him of his travels of over three centuries ago he records such villages in this neighborhood.

Ash Beds Found.
No fewer than four distinct ash beds have been uncovered, while articles unearthed included a large amount of pottery, stone awls, flints, the bones of deer, coons, wild dogs, bears, wild turkeys, wild pigeons and wild ducks; also crane and fish vertebrae and turtle and clam shells, with numerous pieces of burned limestone used in fireplaces. One of the ash beds measures some 40 feet or more in width by about 75 feet in length. These beds, on the river side, were frequently palisaded with stakes or saplings driven into the ground, two or more feet apart, and interwoven with willows, thus forming a wicker-work and constituting a species of retaining wall. The site shows plainly where numerous upright posts stood in a straight line.

Different Encampments
Mr. Wintemberg explains that, as four ash beds have been discovered, one above the other, this indicates no fewer than four different encampments, with possibly a period of some 30 or 90 years between each.

Three men are now helping in excavation, and Mr. Wintemberg thinks that markers should be placed to indicate the Attimandaron villages which it is known existed throughout this area, and whose identity would probably be quite capable of establishment.

England Buying Habits Becoming Canadianized

Halifax, N.S.—England is becoming Canadianized in its buying habits to an amazing extent, declared Douglas S. Sole, Canadian trade commissioner to the west of England, Wales and the Midlands, following his arrivals here for the purpose of interesting exporters in trade possibilities with the British Isles.

The modern Englishman could rise in the morning from a Canadian-made bed into a Canadian carpet, lather himself with a Canadian shaving cream, shave with a Canadian razor, breakfast on Canadian cereals, Canadian bacon, Canadian flour, all cooked on a Canadian gas or electric range and kept wholesome in a Canadian refrigerator, while he read a newspaper printed on Canadian paper. He could drive in a Canadian car to an office equipped with Canadian steel furniture, dictate letters on Canadian paper and signed with a Canadian fountain pen, to a stenographer who uses Canadian cosmetics. He buys his wife Canadian furs and informs her he is being kept late at the office, using a telephone invented by a Canadian. He reduces his weight by a Canadian massage roller, plays racquets in Canadian rubber shoes, tries to look graceful on Canadian skates, and drives his doctor to starvation with Canadian apples. Finally, he can be put in a coffin made from Canadian lumber and decorated with Canadian hedges, start for the cemetery in a hearse with a Canadian chassis, wearing—if he has let that kind of life—a Canadian asbestos suit.

At Fifty

I have lived still a watcher by the way-side
For a procession that has never come.
The day has been fine enough, the road quite pleasant,
And once I caught the far thrill of a drum.
Waiting in hope, I have not been unhappy.
For there were birds, flowers, trees and the open sky;
And, when I heard it—the incredible music
Of life at last, life to the full and sweet!
It seems for a minute to be coming toward me:
But it went down, after all, some one else's street.

No doubt I ought to have tackled life—
—gone to meet it.
Seized on a banner, become important;
But I just wasn't made so, didn't know how to treat it,
And so am lost, like all who hesitate.
There was to have come a place in the procession
That I should have recognized as being my own;
I was to have caught up in color and movement
By one sure hand—to have been no more alone.
But nothing has happened, and the day grows chilly:
A cold bed waits for the going down of the sun:
It seems a curious way to have spent a lifetime—
Strange to be nearing the end of what has never begun.
—Seymour Poole.

Passing Thirst

By Monroe Heath

I used to think it mattered if I made some sort of tower for the world to see
Remaining briefly towards eternity
Beyond the hour when my bones are laid
Beneath the turf, and recollections said.
To-night, with earth and ocean circling me,
Immense and silvered spaces set me free:
The difference dies, and young ambitions fade.

It will suffice if, ceasing not too soon
And not forgetful, I may linger for
A little while, return, still understand
The mute antiphony of earth and moon;
Hearing waves rustle, creeping up the shore;
Watching the white birds skim across the sand.

Fossil Deposits Found in Wyoming

Expedition Discovers Oligocene Fauna Said to be Millions Years Old

Cambridge, Mass.—Discovery near Torrington, Wyo., of one of the most important oligocene fossil deposits known to date in this country—one believed to have been guarded by nature for millions of years—was announced by Harvard University here, recently.

The deposit was discovered and developed by an expedition from the Harvard Museum of Comparative Zoology under the leadership of Erich M. Schlaikjer.

The find lies four miles south and west of Torrington, and presents an outcrop of bones over a half-mile in length. The layers of bones vary from ten inches to three feet in thickness.

The bones are mainly of the little three-toed horse mesohippus and the rhinoceros caenopus, but almost every member of the oligocene fauna is represented, it was said.

It was pointed out that one of the most important features of the deposit was in the fact that fossil bird material occurred in abundance. The only other known deposit in the world where fossil bird bones occur in such abundance as those found in Wyoming is in pleistocene beds at Rancho la Brea in California.

Schlaikjer, in an account of the expedition, said that nature had guarded the thousands of mesohippus skeletons for millions of years.

The expedition leader also reported that a dinosaur deposit, hitherto unknown was discovered during a side trip to Colorado and New Mexico.

INDIGESTION Banished by Kruschen

"I suffered for some years from a bad stomach. I used to feel very miserable after meals. The doctor advised me to take Epsom Salts, but it did me no good. I decided to try Kruschen and am now taking it and have done for the past 12 months, and I am very glad to tell you that my stomach is now in perfect order. I feel as young in spirit as I was 20 years ago, thanks to Kruschen." (W.B.) You know how badly an engine runs when it gets clogged up. It's the same with your body when your gastric or digestive juices fail to flow. What you need is a tonic—Nature's own tonic—Nature's six mineral salts.

You get all these six salts in Kruschen. The first effect of these salts is to promote the flow of the saliva and so awaken the appetite. The next action occurs in the stomach, where the digestive juices are encouraged to pour out and act upon the food. Again, in the intestinal tract, certain of these salts promote a further flow of these vital juices which deal with partly digested food and prepare it finally for absorption into the system.
