12 Letter from St. Catharines Gen. Hospital, re maintenance of Mrs. F. Caughill

Moved by Mr. Marshall, seconded by Mr. Wheeler, that the auditors report be adopted as read. Carried.

Report of Home Committee

The Home Committee met at the Home on Oct. 14th and had the following report to submit. We have checked over the accounts of the Children's Aid and the Home for the month of September and found them correct and recommend them to the Finance Committee for payment.
Would recommend that a quarterly grant of $175 be paid to the Children's Aid Society
There are at present 14 females and 16 males. Since our last meeting there has been one commitment, that of Mr. Richard Barlow, committed by Mr. Thos. Jepson of Hagersville, and no deaths. Health of the inmates is power, outside their hockey activities, in some cases, often which they do not even bother to make a pretence of performing. I can give chapter and verse of half a dozen recent cases—that is, recent within three or four seasons—where a hockey player on the payroll of a commercial organization supporting a hockey club for advertising purposes never went near the plant except on pay day.

"In the office of one of the best known daily newspaper sports editors in the Dominion about a year ago, I was present when a telegraph messenger delivered a wire from the mayor of a manufacturing city in the Maritime provinces, with a population of around 12,000 people. My friend the sports editor passed the yellow sheet on to me. This is what I read:—

"Wire me collect can you sent us reliable goal-tender defence man and left winger stop guarantee easy jobs forty a week."
The sports editor said: "I get three or four of them every season. There are always a few promising kids kicking around a big town like this who are glad to spend the winter playing hockey somewhere else. They get bigger salaries than they could command here, where competition is keener. The usual run is between twenty-five and fifty dollars a week. Depends on the size of the town and the reputation of the player. What do they work at? Don't make me laugh. They don't have to work at all unless they want to.
The unhappy fact is that the governing body of amateur hockey is unable today to enforce discipline in its own ranks, so powerful has the spirit of commercialism and opportunism become during the past few years.

We had a prize example of this only last season. A professional club employed a well-known hockey organizer to go out into the highways and byways seeking a team to serve them as an amateur farm. He was given a fat bankroll, the assurance of attractive rink bookings and a place in the local senior group.
The organizer persuaded all the players of a certain amateur team whom he desired to rally to his banner. The amateur governing officials held a meeting and regarding it the author says: "What followed—and remember this was only last year—was just plain farce."
The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association refused to sanction the deal. The players went right ahead and transferred. The officials forbade other clubs in the senior group to play against the new team—outlawed it severely, you might say. There were mysterious meetings with anxious reporters waiting in the halls for mighty edicts; sealed decisions; secret conferences. It was tremendously exciting and impressive, and after it was all over the league opened on schedule, defying the officials, with

A by-law guaranteeing $30,000.00 of debentures about to be issued by the Village of Hagersville to pay for the cost of erecting an addition to the High School building was passed.

Professional vs Amateur Hockey

That a great number of so-called amateur hockey players are really professionals is the startling charge made by Fredrick Edwards in the November 1st issue of McLean's Magazine. This state of affairs has been in existence for years, the author claims—giving names and dates to prove his claim—but it is only in recent years that the practice has become so open that "the boys" do not hesitate to accept cheques. However, says Mr. Edwards: "The cash-payment boys are in the minority. Only in the larger cities is the general public so hardened to sham amateurism that it has become the subject of open jest in the market places. The more usual custom is to reward the players with jobs, for which they are paid salaries far beyond their earnings

CATARACT

The eye, which is the most precious organ of the special senses, may suffer from disease or injury in spite of the natural protection afforded it. The mechanism of the sight may also become disordered. Abnormal conditions of the eye usually occur during certain age periods; for example, cataract ordinarily develops in middle life or later.

The lens of the eye is a crystal-like structure. The rays of light are focused by the lens on the retina. If the nutrition of the lens is interfered with, there is a change in the tissues which make up the lens, which change results in the loss of some of the crystalline or transparent character of the lens.

The loss of transparency means the beginning of opacities, and this change usually begins at the margin of the lens. As long as the opacity is limited to the margin, it has little or no effect on the sight. As soon as it spreads into the line of direct sight vision becomes less clear.

As this progress continues, the lens may swell, harden and thicken, and there is, as a result, a great change in the mechanism of sight of the person affected. Elderly persons may read without the magnifying glasses which they have been using and experience, for a time, what is popularly known as "second sight."

Later, as the condition progresses, the lens becomes completely opaque, and there is little sight left. In order to restore sight it is necessary, by surgical means, to remove the lens.

The operation properly performed is safe, painless and successful in a very high percentage of cases.

Cataract may follow any injury or may develop because of interference with the nutrition of the lens. Any one part of the body is affected by the condition of the other parts. It may be that the absorption of poisons or toxins from diseased teeth, tonsils, gall-bladder, or other focus of infection is the true cause of the eye condition in many cases.

Beginning cataract should suggest a most careful examination of the whole body in order to detect and correct any abnormal condition. Proper glasses should, of course, be used in order to avoid any strain which results from the wrong type glasses.

The cataract itself is a degenerative change; it means that the eye is growing old in other prematurely or otherwise. Once the condition is started, it will likely progress, but the rate of development may be checked by removing the underlying causes. Many persons with beginning cataract go on for many years without having their sight sufficiently affected to warrant the extensive making an operation necessary.

Prevention of cataract means the keeping of the body in good health, the prompt removal or treatment of focal infections, and the use of proper glasses.

Questions concerning cataract addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

Quebec Lt.-Governor Visits Festival

Did the edict of banishment stick? It did not. Did the flouted officials resign in disgust? They did not.

Exactly nothing happened. The league completed its schedule and its play-offs, and entered its champion for the Allan Cup. The "outlaw" team played steadily right along, finishing in fact, in second place.

The author does not merely point out faults in the present system; he suggests a remedy.

In Great Britain an amateur is one who plays games for fun, and a professional one who plays for profits. That is all.

So it comes about that in England we have the pleasing spectacle of peers of the realm, princes of the royal blood of India, lawyers and mer chants, parsons and postmen, tinkers tailors and candlestick makers, amateurs and professionals, playing side by side or in competition with one another in country and club cricket, and rugby and association football.

On the other hand, in Canada, we find an honest professionalism out-cast and a pseudo-amateurism encouraged. In order to protect their precious amateur standing in which is involved the amateur standing of their team mates and opponents hockey players who need the money are required to scheme and pretend and perjure themselves. Responsible officials, refusing to face the facts, condone practices which make of our best non-professional hockey clubs speakeasies of sport purveying a synthetic and bootlegged amateurism to their supporters.

Straightforwardness, sincerity, truth; surely these are the rockbottom foundations of real sport. If we are to have big games and paid performers let us at least be frank about it. Give the players a fair share of the money they pull into the rinks; but give it to them openly as clean money honestly earned through their skill on the ice, not shabbily disguised as pay cheques for jobs they do not perform.

"Let's make Hockey honest again."
