Falls' Store Junior Fashion Show

A very unusual and outstanding event took place at Falls' Store, Saturday, March 28th, at 3 p.m., the scene of a Junior Fashion Show, featuring "Fabric Contrast" in Junior Frocks, Ensembles and Coats for Springtime wear, displayed by 38 living models aged from the little tot of two years to the 'teen-age miss.

Under the spell of Easteride the stage was decorated with drapes and hangings of Easter colorings, yellow orchid and purple, banked with pots of yellow daffodils and purple cineraria, green ferns and Easter lilies. Peter Rabbits peeping here and there.

The curtains were drawn by two pages, dressed in yellow satin suits, displaying an unforgettable scene. Behold a choir of 26 junior voices in white robes, accompanied by an organ, singing two Easter selections. The idea of this opening number was very effective and the audience appreciated the depth of intonation. "First things first," and decided praise is due to the director of this arrangement.

There were eighteen scenes, each caring for groups featuring garments for all occasions, and no less than 382 garments and accessories were displayed.

your pardon? . . . Yes, I am sure you do . . . Myself? I'd rather not mention any names over the phone. You understand, don't you? He told me to tell you that it is absolutely necessary that no connection is known to exist between you and for that reason he does not dare take the chance of getting into touch with you tonight, but he will manage it somehow by early afternoon tomorrow . . . What say? . . . Yes, it is very serious, otherwise he would hardly have telegraphed you to come on from San Francisco . . . No, personally, I don't know. That was his message but I was also to warn you on no account to leave your rooms, or have communication with anybody until you hear direct from him . . . No, I do not know the particulars. I only know that he is apparently in a hole, and a bad one, and that he is now afraid that you will get into it. You are sure you are fully understood? . . . No, not at all! I am sure only too glad . . . Good-night.

For a full five minutes he remained silent and without movement in his chair, apparently utterly oblivious of the other, who stood, shifting a little awkwardly from foot to foot, in the opposite side of the desk. Then Crang spoke—more to himself than to Birdie.

"He'll be anxious, of course, and growing more so," he said. "He might make a break of some kind. I'd have to fix that. I'm not ready yet. What?"

Birdie, from staring intently at the wall, came to himself with a sudden start at what he evidently interpreted as a direct question.

"No—I mean, no, you're not ready." Crang glared at the man contemptuously.

"What the hell do you know about it?" he inquired caustically.

He picked up the telephone directory, studied it for a moment, then, reaching for the desk telephone, asked for his connection. Presently the Payne-Miloy Hotel answered him and he asked for Mr. R. L. Peters' room. A moment later and a voice reached him over the phone.

"Is that Mr. Peters?" Crang inquired quietly. "Mr. R. L. Peters of San Francisco?" . . . Yes? Then I have a message for you, Mr. Peters, from the person who sent you a telegram a few days ago . . . I beg

I am sure only too glad . . . Good-night.

Crang, with a curious smile on his lips, hung up the receiver. He turned abruptly to Birdie.

"You got a taxi tomorrow," he said brusquely. "We'll wait it for two or three hours. Slip the chauffeur whatever is necessary, and change places with him. See? You'll know where to find one that will fall for that. Then you come here for me at 4 1/2 o'clock—the boat sails at four—you come here at half past eight sharp. Get me?"

"Sure!" said Birdie, with a grin.

"That's a cinch!"

"All right, then!" Crang waved his hand. "Beat it!"

Birdie left the room. A moment later the front door closed behind him.

Crang picked up the letter and examined it critically. The lower three or four inches of the paper was slightly crinkled, but quite dry now; the body of the original letter showed no sign whatever of his work up on the lower portion.

Birdie, from staring intently at the wall, came to himself with a sudden start at what he evidently interpreted as a direct question.
