STORY OF A MISSING ACTRESS AND THE TAXING OF WITS TO EXPLAIN HER FATE.

BY NANCY BARR MAVITY.

rying to get an interview with Dr. Cavanaugh, meets Barbara Cavanaugh, the attractive daughter, and finds she was engaged to Don before his marriage. Dr. Cavanaugh identifies a body burned in the tule marsh outside the city as that of Shella O'Shay. Barbara faints when she hears this, Mrs. Kane, Shella's mald, is arrested, and Peter learn that Shella forced Ellsworth to marry her by a breach of promise threat. Peter makes a social call on Barbara.

CHAPTER XXII.—(Cont'd.)

"Look here," he said again. "Are you taking me for a friend?"

"Yes," she said quietly. "I've no business to, I suppose. But I think I am."

Peter sighed a heavy, lusty and by no means chivalrous sigh with which to greet an offer of friendship. "It complicates things, rather. But it's worth it."

"Thanks." That was said as a small boy might say it, hiding feeling with an abrupt casualness.

"Seemed gray and chilly, tricked out in the flaming mockery of orange marigolds. Don Ellsworth belonged to her own tribe.

"I am. Up to the very day that I got his wedding announcement, I thought Don and I were engaged. I just had to believe there was some explanation—he wasn't the sort of person who could let you down without a reason. Of course I'm glad to know he didn't do a thing like that of his own free will!"

"You care—such a lot?"
