What Has The Bennett

A Message From Mark C. Senn

I feel confident that if the issue is decided upon such considerations as fidelity to trust reposed, concrete accomplishments in office, and a constructive and practical program for future progress, the government need have no apprehension concerning the outcome.

I realize, however, that 1930 is five long years ago, and that to expect the average citizen, busy with his personal problems and everyday pursuits, to have followed, understood, and remembered all the actions of the ministry during that time and to have appreciated the intimate way in which they have been bound up with the well-being of the Canadian people, is to expect the impossible. During the next few days in these columns, accordingly, I intend to trace briefly the record of the Bennett administration, to which I have lent at all times my consistent co-operation, believing that in so doing I was serving the best interests of the men and women of Haldimand. I will be brief, because I want the articles to be read and I realize how many people are instinctively intimidated by anything in the nature of a long, heavy article. Each of my messages will not take above three minutes to read, and will be strictly if briefly in accordance with the facts.

I have promised that each article win be brief. In order not to violate that pledge in the beginning, only a little space remains to me today. I will use it to make my first and—from the standpoint of the government—one of my most important statements. That is, that the Bennett Government, at the end of its term, looks out upon brighter prospects for the future prosperity of Canada than it met when it took office. The newspaper headlines tell the story beyond possibility of contradiction. On October 29, 1929, the Toronto Globe referred to "panie" in all commodity markets. The Montreal Star on the same day published a streamer proclaiming "Wildly erratic wheat markets follow general plunge." In other newspapers vivid captions told the sensational story of mounting unemployment, of choas in agriculture, of Annual Convention

Government Done?

Within a few weeks now a Federal general election will be held Within a few weeks now a Federal general election will be held and the people of this constituency, in common with their fellow-citizens throughout the Dominion, will go to the polls to designate the government into whose hands they wish to entrust the destinies of Canada for the next five years. Speaking for myself,—but at the same time expressing what I believe to be the sentiment of every candidate of the Bennett Government—my principal desire is that the people shall be enabled to make their decision upon the basis of the merits of the cases submitted by the various competing political parties. I feel confident that if the issue is decided upon such considerations as fidelity to trust reposed, concrete accomplishments in office, and a constructive and practical program for future progress, the government need have no apprehension concerning the outcome.
