PASSENGER HAZARD

That a motorist may lose everything he owns as a result of a kind-by gesture in giving a lift to a friend is not an imaginative situation. Such cases have been through the courts. And while the motorist, when he has been at fault, cannot complaint if he has to bear the cost of injuries to pedestrians or the occupants of other cars on the highway, he has, it seems, valid ground for complaint if the guest in his own car in accepting a ride accepts no risk, the liability, if any, falling on the motorist as a result of his generous impulse.—Toronto Tales and the watchmaking trade is not an isolating part of the dearth of apprentices in the watchmaking trade is not an isolating inpulse.—Toronto Tales and twenty and the watch making trade is not an isolating part of the characteristics.
