In dried-out years — and Amulet had its share of them — farmers there received supplies of vegetables from other sections. Now they find themselves in a position to help and they know where others are who need help, so they are keeping the thing going.

It is well that those farmers in Saskathewan shipped vegetables to those in need; it is well that some person who heard about it had the good sense to speak will the control of the Laplanders; it has neither tradition nor background, little past, ho present to speak of, at best a mighty uncertain future.
