In The Garden

There is something in the orange-tinted sunbeams that endows all Nature with a soft radiance... There is still much color in the garden...

Yet amid Autumn scenes, the fresher tints of Spring flowers flash before the imagination... the bulbs of the crocuses, anemones, lily-cilicths, scilla, aconites and snowdrops...

He drove slowly, one hand resting, sensitive on the wheel, and the other on the gear shift... "As though you were playing everything and everybody—but you don't pity me, do you, April face?"

"We must talk this over!" Joan burst out, for nothing distressed and oppressed her more than when he made love to her.

"We'll go to Woolwich and go on the ferry," was all his reply, and a moment later he said, "Confound that fellow, cutting in like that!"

"This is serious," said Joan, as she moved, casually, to the seat further from him along the seat... "You see that you can't do anything about this?"

"Or does it make you think me easier to get?" "It has had a curious effect on me; it has made me realize how it is that I want, Joan, you yourself, and you only."

"If we married I suppose you would have my mother and father and Maude and the boys to live with us at Stenning Court—that's the name of your country home, isn't it?"

At Last! A Tribute to the Doctor

Dr. A. H. Browne of Cochrans, tramped fifteen miles through the bush to attend to an indigent patient. It is quite an achievement, and one that is not infrequent in the medical fraternity...

It is surprising that so many people sneer at doctors, and say that all they care about is the money end of it. If a doctor's bookkeeper could tell, he'd tell another story.

From the point of view of mental and physical hygiene, the summer holiday is a most valuable institution. Sir W. Arbuthnot Lane, one need not be a profound psychologist to appreciate how modern life with its overtime depressing routine, its rush and bustle tends to wear down the nervous system...
