The man of imagination without Plenty of Sunlight Urged For Winter House Plants

In winter many house plants grow spindly and weak. They lose their healthy greenness. Usually this condi-tion is due to insufficient sunlight. Green plants must have sunlight in order to utilize this energy to manufacture and store food necessary in their growth. In the absence of sunlight the sores of food previously manufactured are utilized and the plants become weak.

During the short days of winter, when the intensity of the sun's rays is low, place the house plants in the spot in the house. Foliage plants (ferns, etc.) will, in general, Love is as a wind blowing thrive with less light than will flower flower of life. Sometimes ing plants.

What many people call indigestion very often means excess acid in the stomach. The stomach nerves have been over-stimulated, and food sours. The corrective is an alkali, which neutralizes the acide instantly. And the best alkali known to medical science is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.
