Prince of Wales—Agriculturist
As demonstrated in the development of his E. P. Ranch in Western Alberta, the Prince of Wales is an enthusiastic breeder of live stock. At the recent Northampton Show at Rushden, His Royal Highness beat some of the most formidable breeders of cattle. One of his Shorthorn bulls and a Shorthorn heifer calt captured first prizes. These animals came from his farm at Lenton. At the Devon show in Tavistock he showed some fine animals and made a great display of farm produce. The Prince pays special attention to the needs of consumers. It is difficult to speak for farmers all over the Dominion, but certainly so far as the farmers of Western Canada are concerned — apart from the drought area of 1931—they are generally speaking getting into better shape now than they have been at any time in the past three years. Which are the easier to blandle, weak hands? Most players probably will reply that strong go game but, if you are just as careand that is probably true. Weak hands, as a rule, offer more problems than the strong ones, but the latter are frequently hafd to handle.

The writer was watching a new Club member playing the other day and, as dealer, he passed a very strong hand. When asked why he did so, he replied:

"The hand was so big, I didn't know what to do with it." This is not an uncommon fault, so learn to be as careful in bidding and playing the strong hands as you are with the weak ones. In the play, particularly, one is apt to become careless with a big and to break. You may lose a trick or so on a big hand and still so passed a trick or so on a big hand and still so passe a trick or so on a big hand and still so game. The only way to become a good Auction or Contract player is to play every hand, strong or weak, for the maximum. No score, rubber game. Z dealt and is field with the two-spade bid and V was forced to bid two no trump or bid one club. What should A now bid with the foregoing hand?

A's proper bid at either Auction or Contract is undoubtedly a double of Z's one club. At one table, A doubled and Y bid four clubs. This was a good bid, for it prevented A and B from bidding. It also forced A to guess as to the proper lead. He led the ace of hearts and then the ace of spades. As a result, Z made five-odd at clubs.

At table No. 2, A bid one no trump, which Y doubled. B was on the job, however, and took A out of the double by bidding two diamonds. Z was now in a difficult position. He knew that A must have spade strength to warrant his no trump bid, but saw no other way to give his partner additional information, so made the bid of the was because it seemed a step bidding and think over A's proper one other way to give his partner additional information, so made the bid of the was because it seemed a step bidding and think over A's proper one of the was pades.
