Top Prices For Lambs Let Us Reason Togethe

From all the information we can gather there fairly heavy crop of lambs thsi year, and methods of m keting likely to be somewhat different due to the fact the Abattoir Companies have decided to place in cold stat only about 50% of what they have used in m of what they have usually stored in [ous years.

They realize from past experience that the consu-ing public seem to prefer fresh lamb rather than lamb from cold storage, and as an illustration we find that accord to Government Statistics there was in storage on A Ist, 1932, some five million twenty two thousand pour as against three million one hundred and fifty thousan pounds on April 1st, 1931, showing that conditions at requirements are changing.

During the last few years the quality of lambs has shown a decided improvement, and by doing so you has done much to stimulate greater consumption, hence dema for greater volume. This has been accomplished by better breeding, better feeding and castration of buck lambs. Light thin lambs do not produce good quality lamb meat. Heard lambs are also undesirable for the market, but good in forther the second secon lambs yielding a dressed carcass of thirty-five to forty pounds are desirable and will command top prices, or it other words well finished lambs weighing 70 to 90 pounds live weight at the market are desirable. Lambs weight over 90 pounds at the market are likely to be discou price. With all these facts before us we feel dispose recommend you to ship out your lambs as they get is and hold unfinished lambs on the farm until fat, but it chief feature is to keep sending them out as they get ready believing as we do that prices will be better during the early season of marketing rather than fall months where receipts are likely to be heavy.

We are anxious that farmers may receive the best possible returns for their lambs, and are asking our ship pers to co-operate with you by maintaining a regular shift ping service and assure our readers that we have a ful staff of experienced salesmen, and in a position to hand all classes of live stock whether by rail or by truck.
