

ORAL HYGIENE

The health of the teeth and the tissues surrounding the teeth is important. It is now generally recognized that serious conditions may arise in other parts of the body as a result of infections about the teeth.

By infections we mean the presence of living germs, and when these are confined or limited to one spot, we refer to that spot as the focus of infection and to the condition as that of a focal infection. Focal infections occur in various parts, the teeth being the common location.

Focal infections occur because of what happens at the focus, but because the germs present at the focus may be carried by the blood stream to other parts of the body. Reaching other parts, the germs may cause disease in such parts, and so we find disease of the heart, kidneys, nerves, joints and other organs, as a result of some focus of infection in the teeth, tooth or other parts.

It is quite true that many people have infected teeth, but yet they do not show any ill results of such infections. They are, however, living with a constant threat hanging over their heads. No one can venture an opinion as to when or for what reason there may occur a spread of germs, with the possibility of the ill results we have indicated. It is, however, as a matter of precaution, to tell you to keep the teeth in a healthy condition.

In order to have healthy teeth, and to avoid those conditions which arise out of diseased teeth, it is necessary that some care be given to them. At the present time, it is unfortunately the case that care usually begins in the later years as an effort to preserve teeth which are already damaged. The reverse should be practiced. Care is needed throughout life, but care of the teeth in childhood will prevent much of the dental trouble that now occurs in adult life. In any case, the child's health demands a healthy mouth just as much as does the health of the adult.

The foundation for sound, healthy teeth is diet. Proper building foods should be provided if a good structure is to be built, and it must not be forgotten that most of the build-up is done during the early years of life. So, it is that milk and green vegetables, which supply calcium and phosphorus—two essential minerals—must be included in the diet. If the teeth are to be kept healthy, they must be exercised through use, and kept clean.

Some coarse foods, such as hard, dry toast, give the teeth an opportunity for exercise, and these should be eaten. The toothbrush should be brushed after every meal, but the most important time for doing this is before retiring, so that the mouth may be cleaned during the hours of sleep. Regular visits to the dentist will permit of the detection and correction of any evidence of disease, before extensive damage or harm can result.

BORN

At his home in the Township of Woodhouse, on Friday, March 25th, Benjamin Lundy passed to his reward.

The late Mr. Lundy was a son of one of our early United Empire Loyalist families who settled in the Niagara Peninsula during the latter part of the last century.

He was married about 1854 to Sarah Elizabeth Legat and to them were born two children. They moved from Pelham to Woodhouse about the year 1873 when the deceased was twelve years of age, and purchased the part of the farm which comprises part of the holdings the deceased possessed at the time of his death.

By constant application to the agricultural cause which he so much enjoyed he had accumulated an estate during his life time which would remain as a monument of his honest efforts. He was a man beloved and respected, not only by his immediate neighbors, but by a wide circle of acquaintances.

He took a deep interest in his church and was an elder of Wesley United Church, where he has worshipped regularly during the past forty years.

Deceased married Hannah Alvilda Marr of the Township of Woodhouse in the year 1897 and to them were born two sons and two daughters, Allan, Benjamin, Detroit; Raymond, Wilson, at home; Lillian Elizabeth, wife of Bud DeLos Priest of Rockford; and Inez Edith, wife of Clarke Torrence of Weston Ont., with their mother, survive.

The funeral was held on Monday, March 28th, with private service at the house and a public service at Wesley United Church, Jarvis, after which interment was made in the family plot at Port Dover Cemetery.

The Hon. pallbearers were the members of the session of Wesley United Church, and the active pallbearers were Wm. Simpson; E. T. Carter; John H. Dellar; Raymond Dunbar; Roy Misner and Thos. Reynolds.

Among the beautiful floral tributes were the following: Session & Stewards of Wesley United Church, basket; Family, spray; Mrs. Adly Hewson, Hamilton, wreath; Mr. and Mrs. Deans, Hamilton, wreath; Mrs. Harrison and family, wreath; and from the following, sprays: Mr. and Mrs. F. VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Editor—The letter in "Voice of the People" that "You'd Be Sprised" feels so badly about did not say on word about "extravagance in keeping the fire engine warms." It stated that the fire apparatus could be kept warm, safe and ready to use at any time of the day or night for less than what the gas bill shows where it is—That was only one item and it was not necessary to point out the other advantages for he who runs may read. This "gent" who always calls the Temperance Hall "an old shack" should be glad to have the engine in a more sumptuous place, but thought that another could and would help things out when there is so much fault found with the present place, appeared to rouse all the envy, jealousy and impudence he certainly seems loaded to the neck. The personal pronoun looms large in "Sprised" letter which he says "remind me" of "I think", "I think", "I think". The blank sheet is likely all he can shoot while hiding behind the bull. If "Interested" would like the fire engine to freeze up he would not have written the proposition to point to it. What village or town miles west of Jarvis has a fire engine to freeze up? only the place is Simcoe and no one would call 12 miles a few. The vaporizing and inaccuracies of "Sprised" get the good of the present place, and outside of his own little crowd of admirers, the rest of the village may not agree with him.

Mr. Editor—That suggestion in a recent paper for the benefit of our fire department was much to the point and it is hoped that the rulers will give it serious consideration. The letter opposing the proposition to point to it, only a lot of impudence and jealousy.

It was nice to read of Tommey's Church in last week's paper. Tommey was converted in the old Methodist church at Jarvis and became a splendid speaker and teacher of the Bible truths. He was instrumental in getting the old Garnet south church moved to a spot up the plank road about 2 1/2 miles south of Jarvis, and it was used as a place of worship for years, in fact, till the worshippers, no doubt, decided they needed no further lessons and sold the sacred pile. It would be interesting to some of those who assisted with the church to learn what became of the proceeds. It's quite a while since the building was sold.

Dear Editor: I often pass the big tree that stands in front of Mr. Blight's mill office. If you ever come that way you may notice a hole in one of the limbs of the tree. Last summer it was the home of a hole-in-one tickler, locally called a yellow Hammer, which frequently drummed upon the metal siding on the mill. A futile attempt to support my wife and family. If any bird intruded he was after him and drove him off, his song increasing in volume. The flicker was, I think, warning intruders off its stamping ground, possibly pleased that it had found such a good sounding drumming place. Piffleus.
