

The Aztec Mystery

A Thrilling Story of the Old West
BY MURRAY LEINSTER

The sun went down over the mountains as the stagecoach rattled over the pass toward Moleville. A sudden sound descended immediately. Beethoven descended immediately. Beethoven had faded completely away from the stage. The girl in the stage shifted and drew her coat more closely about her and rearranged the lapdog so that it had a somewhat officiously adjusted position.

The driver turned his head and spat. "You fellows," he observed acerbically to a pair of lounging figures in the back of the stage, "might get that artillery of yours unlimbered. Make a show of carrying 'em any anyhow." A match glowed as a cigarette was lit.

There was another cautious pause. A movement below the stage. Then another. The stage guards moved carefully forward. The girl's eyes were fixed upon them. The driver's eyes were fixed upon them. The girl's eyes were fixed upon them.

The girl murmured in her ear. "If you go into details later, you'll get into trouble. That is in his natural talk just now. There's Moleville ahead. You can see the lights about the mine."

Against Clocks

By Amanda Benjamin Hall in "Tribune"

Put not your trust in clocks, I say. For clocks are faithless fellows, regarding further still, than we, the poor lady before the gaiters!

Such ticklers, tick on tick. Their discourse is the same. Of persons lying and their pain. For they know the pain.

How long it's pain, how long 'twill run. And ends success. At last. When fevered nights are done. When there is light and peace.

They set a swift, impatient pace. With a beeping claim. They know you wear the straightest face.

Once on a hill-top wreathed with snow. In thyme and sun-awet clover. A clock's face leaning from a tower. Kicked me and my lover.

Two, having neither dial nor chat. With but the beating of their hearts. To cause eternity.

Afforded, then it told the town. It drove its engines hard. And fast—'t would not tarot. Their fury, nor retard.

Their haste. When love lay like a Sown deeply, silently. It still ticked on—nor seemed it. That time had stopped for me.

The Peace of the World

Dr. Mary Emma Woodley. It is not an overstatement that the possibility of world peace hinges upon the important question whether the principle of the sanctity of contract is vital to the new order, and it is unthinkable that the League of Nations should not have been able to accomplish its purpose.

Travel Figures Show Heavy Falling Off

Ottawa.—About 5,000,000 more Canadian cars entered Canada from the United States last year, which is 500,000 fewer than in 1920. Nearly two-thirds of these were for a period not exceeding 24 hours, and only 700 were for more than 60 days.

The World's Fastest Speed Driver

There may be some New York taxi drivers rounding street corners who hold unofficial records, but Sir Malcolm Campbell still has the undisputed title for the fastest traveling over land. Recently at the wheel of his 358 mile an hour motor car, he swept eight miles an hour faster than he had ever done before.

Trade of World Drops 27 Per Cent

London.—World trade in 1921 decreased by approximately 27 per cent, compared with 1920 and by approximately 41 per cent, compared with 1929, according to figures compiled by the Board of Trade. The decrease is attributed to various economic factors and the impact of the global situation.

Smart Men

"Once over" at this season. Men care too little for dress, and will let them go if their wives don't keep them up to the mark. It is the well-dressed man who gets the business and the pleasure. The smart man is the one who is always well-prepared for any occasion.

Big Testimonial Banquet Sometime in January

"I suppose your little girl is quite big enough now to be a good deal of help to her mother." "No, she won't be any help to her mother until she can play a better game of cards."
