"What a gorgeous revenge for Jane to take! How-like her! Where is she now?"

Cropsey looked at the lail young man in the stable boy's clothes. There were other feelings to be considered now besides his chief's.

"That explosion you heard a little while ago," he said, "was the dramatic conclusion of a stormy life." Wondering whether he ought to preface what was coming next with the word "unfortunately" and deciding not to, "Jane Runnels is dead—really dead at last. most of us love to hoard things in our cupboards, and we have to exert a great deal of will power to do away with a lot of accumulated junk. Nobody, however, should hesitate to throw away old medicine bottles (if you've kept the stuff too long, it may be poisonous), aged powder puffs, old letters, hats, frocks, and shoes you'll never wear again, broken bits of cheapjewellery, broken china and glass, pictures and furniture put away to be mended—all these come under—the head of hoarding and away they must to. As you probably know, all Bo Scouts look forward to the summer terest the way in which Colonel Baden ime when at least it is hoped to spend Powell, the resourceful defender of time when at least it is hoped to spend a few days in a camp. Every year a large number of Boy Scout Troops from the towns and cities go out to the country or the lake shore and spend a week or two under canvas, and benefit very greatly, both in health and training, by the experience. Last year no fewer than 4500 Boy Scouts in Ontario attended Registered Scout Camps in this manner.

Powell, the resourceful defender of Mafeking during its siege in 1900 and very greatly for the Boy Scouts had printed and signed by his army paymaster a voucher "good for the sum of 1s." and back ed by the promise to exchange it for coin "on the resumption of the civil law." At the top of the voucher appeared the Lion and Unicora of the Scouts in Ontario attended Registered Scout Camps in this manner.

But 1933 does not hold out such bright hopes, as money is scarce, and it costs a great deal of money to organize such a camp. Thus it is feared that many boys will not be able to afford to attend a camp this year, owing to the high cost.

Dominion Headquarters, however, has made a suggestion which we think

Dominion Headquarters, nowever, has made a suggestion which we think is very practical. Many Lone Scouts are living on farms, where living is also a difficult problem. Perhaps on the farm there is a barn, sufficiently large to house a troop of about 30 large to house a troop of about 30 States, recently, was not a new idea large to house a troop of about 30 city boys. The Lone Scout or the farmer gets together with the City Troop and arrangements are made to house the boys in the barn for a couple of weeks. The city boys provide items which must be purchased, such as sugar, tea, cocoa, canned goods, jam, etc., and the farm provides garden produce, eggs, milk, fruit, poultry and perhaps meat.
