Good Form On the Court

It is the outlook of the child that is needed in religion. To a child the unseen realities are very real. Wordsworth, in his Intimations of Immortality, writes:

. Trailing clouds of glory do we come God, who is our home:
Heaven lies about us in our infancy!
But as we grow older, it grows more dim until:

At length the Man perceives it die away,
And fade into the light of common day.

To a child there are no social distinctions. "I wish you would find antinctions." I wish you would find antinctions. "I wish you would find antinctions." I wish you would find antinctions. "I wish you would find antinctions." I wish you would find antinctions. "I wish you would find antinctions." I wish you would find antinctions. "I wish you would find antinctions." Christ must have the throne in our hearts. Not even money, masterful as it is, may usurp that position.

If the rich man cannot get in, what about the rest of us? To accomplish it, says Jesus, will be nothing short of a miracle—a miracle of grace, v. 27. "So opposed to current ideas was such a thought, that the disciples, accustomed to think that wealth meant happiness, were amazed. If the same doctrine were proclaimed in any great commercial centre today, it would excite no less astonishment. At least, many Christians and others live as if the opposite were true. Wealth possessed, and not trusted in, but used aright, may become a help towards eternal life; but wealth as commonly regarded may be a curse."
