Christmas with all it's joys and festivities is drawing near, a feeling of happiness and good will toward others predominates throughout the yuletide season and we are inclined to a greater degree of responsibility, our duty toward our fellow men.

Individualism is less prominent to-day than before we became subjects of the general depression that began a few years ago, it seemed essential for us to suffer, in not receiving our every desire, before we could realize this. But now as 1933 is drawing to a close, it is becoming apparent that our Country is regaining its soundness and that the majority of citizens are in a better position to do good and help others than they were a year ago, however there are a great many who will face a sad and dreary Christmas if those more fortunate do not help them by sharing the gifts they have already received. Christmas is the one day that should bring happiness to the hearts of all people and if we can realize sufficiently the gifts that we receive throughout the year we will have happiness and it will be our earnest desire to bring still greater happiness to our fellowmen. The Christmas gift exemplifies the Christmas spirit as it commemorates friendship and loyalty and serves as a binding link between father and son and mother and daughter and strengthens our faith in one another. Let us then portray our thanks to God for the many good things He has bestowed upon us in more freely sharing His kindness with our ererrerrerre Christmas Message

There is a danger with ring events, we get used to We cease to marvel and wen at them, we take them for grantand miss the thrill. There is also the danger of becoming so familiarized with recurring events th t we cease to think about it. Margaret Sidney, the poetess, asks "What Does Christmas Mean?"

and answers her own question by ying that Christmas means "Love"
"What does it mean this Christmas wn from the ages sent? Out of the lips of a little child, hat is the message meant? Into one word it is prisoned gular return frequently empties it of its meaning.

The remarkable thing about Christ mas time, is that it is a revelation, an unveiling of a mystery. It is the story of the unfolding of God's purpose and thought. Jesus Christ was the fullest expression of that thought and purpose. God is love thought and purpose. God is love and Jesus Christ is the sure eviden-ce of that character and passion, which become visible on Christmas
