WHITE PINE BLISTER

Than I ever have been before. Experimental Farms Note)
Blister rust is a disease, generally fatal to white pine, which is caused by one of the rust fungi. Certain of the rusts are unique in that they require two different host plants upon which to complete their life cycles. The fungus which causes blister rust is one of these as it must have white pines on the one hand and currants or gooseberries on the other for its full development.
